SEATTLE MEN TO BACK NEW HOTEL HERE

U.S. Financiers Will Build Apartment House in Victoria

Have Secured Site For Hostelry Catering to Tourists

Seattle, Feb. 20.—Faith of United States capitalists in the future of Victoria as a tourist resort is emphasized by the raising of capital here with a view to the erection of a modern apartment hotel in the business section of the British Columbia capital. A central site in Victoria has been secured for the building to be erected.

Plans have been prepared and the capital is available for the new apartment house. It is reported in financial circles in this city that the building will be completed in the near future. The project is being handled by a group of financiers who have secured a site in the heart of the city. The building is to be a structure of the most modern design, several stories high, of brick and concrete construction and equipped with every facility to meet the exacting needs of the tourist trade.

According to present plans, it is stated, the building will be completed to handle part of this summer's record tourist travel. In addition to United States capital, several Victoria men are also interested in the project. A careful check on the number of tourists staying a few days in Victoria, together with a close estimate of the number who have been turned away during the height of the tourist season for lack of accommodation, has convinced those behind the venture that there is ample need for such a hostelry in Victoria.

It would not have thought such a thing could possibly happen in this age if I had not been there myself, and had the fact impressed upon me in the most uncomfortable manner," said Capt. Spindler.

The firing had been done from a short distance, and had begun after the Seneca had placed a target within 100 yards of the Eastwood, he said.

The skipper claimed the target put out by the Seneca had been only a blind.

They had the whole sea for their target," he said. "If it was target practice they wanted, why did they select a particular spot not more than 100 yards away from my port side, and then the ship, pumping out shells, the majority of which were scoring hits not on the target, but on my vessel, and endangering the lives of myself and my crew."

Throughout the entire encounter, the captain said, no word was exchanged. When the appearance of an oil tanker made it possible for him to escape, the Seneca followed the schooner for a couple of miles and then left her.

None of the Eastwood's crew was injured. New York officials of the United States coastguard last night said Capt. Spindler's report could hardly be true.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—(Canadian Press)—No representations have yet been made to the Federal Government in protest against the alleged action of a United States Government cutter in firing on the Lunenburg schooner Eastwood off the coast of New Jersey. This was learned this morning through inquiries at several government departments. It is understood that when a protest is received and an official report of the incident has been secured, the Government will take the matter into consideration. So far the Government has received no information except that contained in the news dispatches.

SHIP RACES FOR PORT WITH FIRE IN HOLD

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 20.—The steamship Kamouraska, which sailed from Lunenburg, N.S., for St. John, N.B., on Wednesday with a cargo of coal, is racing for Halifax with full speed with a fire raging in her hold.

POISONOUS FOOD CAUSE OF DEATHS

Five Russians and Armenians
in Los Angeles Lost Their Lives

Los Angeles, Feb. 20.—Five recent deaths in the Russian and Armenian quarter here are attributed by Health Commissioner George Parrish to botulism poisoning caused by poisonous food sold in grocery stores of the neighborhood.

As a result a cleanup of all stores in the district is being made.

ITALIAN JAILED BECAUSE PREMIER FELT INSULTED

Turin, Feb. 20.—The new legal axe recently created by Premier Mussolini to protect himself from insults has had Enrico Templa, a communist, as its first victim.

Templa, found in possession of pamphlets containing matter considered insulting to the Premier, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment and a fine of 500 lire, under the law of December 21, 1925.

RICH DEPOSIT OF PLATINUM IS FOUND IN NORTHWEST TERRITORY

Edmonton, Feb. 20.—A wireless dispatch from Fort Smith, N.W.T., states a platinum deposit, said to show the richest strike ever discovered in that metal, has been found in the vicinity of Caribou Island, not more than eight miles from Fort Fitzgerald, the deposit extending along the Slave River to a short distance from Fort Chipewyan, one of the oldest forts in the North. It was discovered by a former Federal surveyor, R. W. Dunne, who came in last summer prospecting.

Target A Blind For Shelling Schooner

Captain Says Lunenburg Vessel Deliberately Bombarded by U.S. Cutter

Halifax, Feb. 20.—Over the telephone from Lunenburg Captain Spindler, master of the schooner Eastwood, insisted to-day his vessel had been struck at least sixty-nine times by shells from the United States coastguard cutter Seneca while the liquor-laden schooner was flying the British flag and lying at anchor twenty-one miles off Long Island.

LEAGUE COUNCIL SEAT FOR POLAND

For Republic is Plan
Now Being Discussed

Germany Displays Good Faith
By Sincerely Aiding League Secretariat

Geneva, Feb. 20.—The election of Poland to be a non-permanent member of the League of Nations Council by the Assembly next September is suggested in influential circles here as a practical solution of the difficulties created by the demands of Poland, Spain and Brazil for permanent seats.

The position of France, as indicated in Geneva, is that she cannot best be advanced by allowing Poland herself to defend Polish interests in the League Council in possible clashes with Germany. Since British opinion is described as overwhelmingly opposed to the creation of new permanent seats in the Council besides that for Germany, it is understood in League circles that the Governments in London, Paris and Berlin are actively carrying on discussions in an effort to reach an accord.

GERMANY CO-OPERATING
Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League, who returned here yesterday from Berlin, is understood to have brought back an excellent impression of Germany's sincerity in desiring to collaborate to insure smooth functioning of the League secretariat. German Germans will be placed as soon as their country is elected to membership. It is stated the German Government showed no tendency to force Sir Eric's hand in the selection of any man to serve at Geneva, but at his request suggested persons best fitted to contribute to the international atmosphere of Geneva.

It is expected, about ten Germans will be added to the secretariat, including an assistant secretary-general.
JAPANESE DISCUSSION
Tokyo, Feb. 20.—The Japanese Government has not reached a decision regarding a suggestion for the enlarging of the Council of the League of Nations and no instructions have been sent to the Japanese representatives at Geneva. This information was given out at the Foreign Office, where it was added the Cabinet expected to take up the matter soon.

TWO MEN MISSING AFTER HOTEL FIRE

Three Severely Injured When
Part of East St. Louis, Ill.,
Building Destroyed

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 20.—Two men were reported missing, three were severely injured and sixty guests were forced to flee in nightclothes when a fire early to-day destroyed a section of the Arnold Hotel here with a loss of $120,000.

Those reported missing were H. L. Cole, day clerk, and a railway man named Kato.

The register was not recovered and A. C. Arnold, proprietor of the hotel, said others might be missing. The injured are all expected to recover.

Carbolic Acid Was Given Man In Liquor Glass

Port Colborne, Ont., Feb. 20.—John Kilbia is in serious condition at his home here as the result of having swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid which police investigating the case say was given him for alcohol in a illicit liquor resort. Kilbia is unable to speak, his lips and stomach being badly burned.

The police believe the acid was given him deliberately.

R.C.M.P. Men In Far North To Hear Radio Messages

Montreal, Feb. 20.—To-night four radio stations in the United States will broadcast a series of messages from relatives to a number of members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who have spent the winter on duty in the Arctic regions. Messages will also be sent to the Oblate Fathers' Mission at Chesterfield Inlet, and to the Moravian Mission in Labrador.

At Craig Harbor two well-known Eskimo guides, Nook Ka Ping and Panik Pah, who will be included in the messages sent.

PREMIER OF SASKATCHEWAN JOINS KING ADMINISTRATION AS MINISTER OF RAILWAYS

Announcement Prairie Leader Succeeding Rt. Hon. G. P. Graham in Federal Cabinet is Expected During the Present Week-end; F. N. Darke Resigns Regina Seat to Provide Constituency for Him.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—Official announcement that Premier Charles Dunning of Saskatchewan will enter the King Government as Minister of Railways and Canals is expected to be made during this week-end.

F. N. Darke, Liberal member for Regina, has resigned his seat in the House of Commons to provide a constituency for Mr. Dunning.

March 23 appears to be the date that will be chosen for the by-election, according to political gossip here.

CHARGE OF MURDER LAID IN VANCOUVER

A. Anderson Appears in Police Court Following Killing of John Bogres

Man and Son Identified Him as Man They Chased From Scene of Crime

Vancouver, Feb. 20.—Alex Anderson, twenty-seven, identified last night by two witnesses as one of the two men involved in the holdup of a confectionery store here last Sunday night in which the proprietor, John Bogres, was shot and killed, appeared in police court this morning before Magistrate Shaw formally charged with murder and was remanded for one week.

Anderson's arrest last night was made following information received at police headquarters to the effect that two men answering the description of the holdup men were in the neighborhood of Howe and Pender Streets. Within a few minutes Detective Cameron apprehended the suspect, his companion making good his escape. Anderson was taken to headquarters, where a line-up of prisoners was at once held.

Walking down the line of men, W. Adams and his son, unmistakably picked Anderson as the man they had chased from the scene of the murder and who eluded them near the Warren Rooms.

The accused man was taken into custody several days ago by the police and held for investigation, but at that time Adams did not see him. John Dallas, who was in the Bogres store at the time of the murder, was not able to identify him.

As a result of the first line-up Anderson was allowed his liberty.

H. YOUNG LEAVES BRITISH LIBERALS

Votes in Commons as Independent; Party Suffers Losses in Liverpool

London, Feb. 20.—Misfortune continues to follow the Liberal Party, with further secessions of prominent figures announced or reported.

Commander Hilary Young, objecting to Lloyd George's land policy as Socialistic, has broken loose from the party and will henceforth sit in the Commons as an Independent. He has been leader of the right wing Liberals, and although he does not intend to join the Conservatives, his loss to the party is serious.

The Liberal Daily Courier says five other Liberals who have figured prominently in the party have signified their desire to join the Conservatives. They are Sir Max and Lady Muspratt, Mrs. F. C. Wilson, J. M. Griffiths and Edward West, all members of the Liverpool city council.

RANCH WORKER ENDED HIS LIFE

Merritt, B.C., Feb. 20.—H. R. Habman, a ranch hand from Manette Lake, committed suicide here yesterday by taking cyanide of potassium, which he had obtained by statute in the morning. He was found by a neighbor who called to see him. The poison was in a glass of beer and was taken by him. He was found by a neighbor who called to see him. The poison was in a glass of beer and was taken by him.

Habman, who is said to have been a member of a very wealthy family in Paris, came to this country at the conclusion of the World War.

WELSH DANCING HOURS RESTRICTED

Curfew Rings at 10 p.m. and Young Enthusiasts Must Cease Their Pastime

Stradgynlais, Wales, Feb. 20.—In an attempt to lift South Wales from "idleness," the magistrates, who consider just ordinary dancing as a dangerous excitement, have passed a resolution to restrict the hours of the "indiscreet" pastime late at night. The "dancing curfew" has been introduced and the 2,518,945 young people in South Wales are not permitted to dance after 10 o'clock. At Pontypridd, near here, the dancing must cease at 9.30 and no dancing is allowed on Sundays or Tuesdays.

PHELPS JOHNSON DIED IN MONTREAL

Builder of Famous Quebec Bridge Succumbed in Hospital This Morning

Born in 1849 in U.S.; Former Head of Dominion Bridge Company

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Phelps Johnson, chairman of the board of directors of the Dominion Bridge Company and formerly its president, died this morning in the Royal Victoria Hospital here. He was born in 1849, coming to Canada from the United States. Mr. Johnson was acting as first vice-president of the Dominion Bridge Company when the feat of spanning the St. Lawrence River at Quebec with a steel cantilever bridge was accomplished. He was a prominent part in the revision of plans that followed the accident and resulted in the final successful completion of the great structure.

WORKED IN U.S.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 20.—Phelps Johnson, builder of the famous Quebec Bridge, whose death in Montreal is reported, began his career in this city.

Unemployment In Germany is On the Increase

Berlin, Feb. 20.—The present serious industrial crisis in Germany is forcing many firms to restrict their operations considerably and the number of unemployed, especially in the Ruhr district, is increasing daily.

Miss Lenglen Shared in Tennis Success To-day

Beaulieu, Feb. 20.—Suzanne Lenglen, having recovered from a collapse she had suffered earlier in the day, this afternoon went on the courts in the tournament here and, paired with Mrs. Phyllis Sotherthwaite of England, defeated Mrs. Noble and Miss Pittman without the loss of a game.

Constable Killed MINERS' ORGANIZER

Drumheller, Alta., Feb. 20.—Jack Nolan, organizer of the United Mine Workers of America here and a well-known boxer, was shot and killed by Constable McKee of the town police at 2 o'clock this morning.

The constable arrested Nolan at the police station on a warrant charging assault. Nolan is said to have attacked McKee, who, after warning him, shot him in the abdomen. Nolan died within half an hour.

Nolan leaves a widow and one daughter.
An inquest will be held.
Constable McKee is being held at the provincial police barracks.
It is stated McKee took Nolan to the police station, where an argument over bail occurred. Nolan is said to have made remarks derogatory to McKee and to have threatened him. The constable warned him, it is claimed, and when Nolan persisted in his attack, he stated to have shot him.

FIRE LOSSES IN CANADA ARE HEAVY

THE HUMAN SIDE OF HIM

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY THIS year finds a large proportion of the American people with more information about their first president than they had twelve months ago. In the interim some industrious writers, notably Rupert Hughes, have been investigating Washington's diary and letters, the contents of which have been published in book and magazine articles. The publication has dispelled a number of illusions which surrounded the father of his country with an unearthly aura, which portrayed him as a paragon of virtue and talent, and placed him on so high a pedestal that the average American could not see him. Indeed, a few centuries hence the rank and file of the American people might have come to classify him with King Arthur, St. George, or some of the illustrious beings in Grimm's fairy tales, because there could be nothing human in one so flawless. Small boys never would try to emulate him, because he would be too far away from them. What could one who was perfect in everything, and did not have to try to be good, know what a fellow has to put up with in this world? What would be the use of trying to be like one who never played hooky from school, never got into mischief, never broke a window, never threw a snowball at the parson, never robbed an orchard or tied a can to a dog's tail? How could he help being a great man, huh? How could he help being president? He never had to try. He had all the breaks. He wasn't so much, after all. So young America would give up as a bad job any attempt to be like George Washington.

But the investigators of Washington's diary have managed to catch hold of the great patriot's coat-tails just as he was disappearing finally into the clouds and bring him back to earth. On the intimate and personal authority of George himself they have portrayed him as he actually was, subject, of course, to the reservation that Washington did not tell everything to his diary. Being human and not celestial, and being noted for his discretion, he kept a few things to himself. His diary shows that his human side was about the same as the human side of every other well-bred Virginian gentleman of his time, and that meant the human side of a typical English squire. He liked to ride with the hounds. He liked a good table, and Mr. Volstead probably is shocked to learn that he was partial to rum. He speaks frequently of enjoying all-night parties, and dancing from dusk to dawn. He kept slaves, of course; in fact he had slaves until he died, although the Declaration of Independence set forth most eloquently the equality of man. And he made his slaves work pretty hard according to his own testimony. He was thrifter than the average squire and made his farm pay.

Washington really was a sort of Cromwell and cavalier-composite, considerably Cromwell in his official and public life and considerably cavalier in his private life. In fact, at times he was very cavalier. His diary and letters prove that the picture which has been so commonly painted of him and the legend of infallibility and solemn, smug sanctimoniousness which has been built around him, are fantastically incorrect. Of course, officials and newspapermen in Washington always have known that picture and legend to be incorrect. The diary and letters of the first president are old to them. But the people in the main, having had an entirely impossible delineation of George Washington impressed upon them for many years, were in danger of feeling some time that, unlike Lincoln, their first chief executive was too remote from them in point of character to belong to them; too spiritual to be regarded as the real father of his country. Like most fathers George had a few little ways of his own.

AWAY OFF

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE Saanich Liberal-Conservative Association last night President Maitland of the Provincial Conservative Association declared that the policies of the Government of this Province were stemming the flow of capital that would otherwise be coming here. In fact he found very little right about British Columbia largely because the party to which he belongs is not in power. Every Conservative speaker and newspaper told the same tale about the whole country for weeks before last October 29. Few speeches have been devoted to that theme since then and practically every Conservative journal has been compelled to accept the fact that the blue ruin they preached was nothing but political claptrap. Mr. Maitland furnished the evidence in his speech at Saanich that he has not caught up with the new anti-Conservative remarks were of the pre-October vintage.

His chief complaint seems to be that there has been little or no industrial development in this Province since the Conservative Government went out of office in 1916. The reason he gives is that capital is exceedingly chary about coming here. How does he reconcile this statement with the fact that in 1914 the value of production from British Columbia's four great natural resources amounted to $104,623,911, while in 1925 it was $210,692,784? How does he account for the substantial yearly increase in the number of industrial establishments in the Province and the ever growing payroll if capital is as timid as he described it at Saanich last night? And what does Mr. Maitland say about the progress which his own city of Vancouver made last year and bids fair to surpass this year? Will he say to the newspapers, and particularly to The Vancouver Daily Province, that all they have been publishing about record home-building figures and the industrial expansion which has been sending commercial figures higher and higher for the last eighteen months is pure bunkum? He will not; Mr. Maitland knows perfectly well that neither he nor any of his Conservative friends can whisper this Province into despair.

IS THERE ANY HURRY?

FRANCE HAS ACTED WISELY IN waiving her demand that Poland be given a permanent seat on the Council of the League of Nations for the present. She has been persuaded that no far-reaching reorganization proposals should be considered until Germany has become a member.

This is the proper attitude to take. Germany must be admitted as a first class nation. If her present status does not entirely entitle her to that designation, it follows that before very long she will have regained in economic prestige much that the war took from her. Poland, on the other hand, could not be admitted to the Council on terms equal to those enjoyed by Great Britain. Such a course, moreover, would obtrude the case for similar recognition of the Dominions of the British Empire. Indeed it is open to debate as to whether there is any need to press reorganization for the moment.

With Germany a member, as she undoubtedly will be in a few weeks, Russia will surely begin to make advances. Her position then will make it difficult for her to stand aloof. What will be her status when she gains entrance? With a population of about 135,000,000 she could not be expected to play second fiddle to either Poland or to any of the South American republics.

THE HALF-HOLIDAY

VANCOUVER RETAILERS ARE NOW discovering that the half-holiday in the middle of the week, or on any working day for that matter, means considerable loss of business. The merchants' bureau of the Board of Trade met on Thursday and, with only one or two dissenting, passed a resolution declaring that, in its opinion, the system now in operation is detrimental to the commercial interests of the city.

The discussion lent emphasis to the fact that Vancouver was the only large city in the Dominion, outside of Victoria, which is compelled to close its stores by law for a weekly half-holiday. The general opinion seemed to be that a forty-four-hour week would be fair to the clerks and to the public, while it would give the merchants an opportunity of doing business six days of the week.

This is a very important matter for the Terminal City and equally so for this community. Many times last Summer our own retailers lost thousands of dollars, because tourists, were unable to shop on Wednesday afternoon. Can Victoria, can Vancouver, afford to advertise this implied lack of desire for business one afternoon a week?

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

LIQUOR EXPORT IN B.C. From The Ottawa Citizen
Protests of the Province of British Columbia against liquor exporting houses have been based largely on self-interest. British Columbia is in the business of selling liquor, under so-called Government control. The province has to pay duty on all liquor imported. The exporting warehouses in the Province, privately owned, bring in shipments of liquor without paying duty. It is held in bond, as liquor for export—ostensibly for export to Mexico by some other remote country.

It is notorious that liquor has been so shipped out of Vancouver without ever having paid duty, only to be smuggled in again at some unguarded spot up the coast. Smuggled liquor has been sold in competition with the liquor in provincial stores. Hence the protests of the Attorney-General of British Columbia, session after session, and the repeated demands of the Province for authority to close the exporting warehouses. The House of Commons in the last parliament, during three sessions, passed the required legislation, but the Senate just as persistently threw it out—with Sir George Foster as one honorable exception on the Conservative side.

CITY MAY ABOLISH OWN LIGHTING PLANT

Investigation Started to See If Services Can be Reduced By Private Contract

Provision For New Comfort Station In Centre of City is Struck Out

Sitting in special session for three hours yesterday afternoon the estimates committee of the City Council considered figures in its budget calling for $359,500. Of this amount appropriations were authorized for approximately $324,784; items calling for $35,716 additional were tabulated and $3,487 was the actual cut made in the amounts sought.

MAY ELIMINATE PLANT

Of the estimated expenditures ratified some $52,000 is for expenses in connection with the City Electric Lighting plant and substitution for the operation of which $55,673 was sought this year. Mayor Pendray raised the point as to whether or not it would be cheaper for the city to buy its lighting and other electrical services complete or to continue the city plant.

The municipal committee of the Council was detailed to make an investigation of the cost of the operation of the plant and of any alternative system. Meanwhile the lighting estimates were passed provisionally. They included $20,000 for power supply, $16,020 for salaries, and about $20,000 incidental in smaller items.

It might pay the city to scrap its lighting plant and contract for the whole service with the B.C.E.R. Company, stated the Mayor, instructing the committee to make an exhaustive examination of the case and report back to the Council as soon as possible.

A MATERIAL SAVING

City electrician, M. Hutchinson, made a plea for the retention of the lighting plant on the ground that it gave a greater range of adaptability to city needs than would the terms of any fixed contract. A material saving in cost might be made by the elimination of the plant, stated the Mayor, standing firm on the decision to investigate the question further with a view to getting an alternative bid from the B.C. Electric Railway Company.

Estimates for the Victoria fire department, library, parks, hospitals and health department were considered and passed. School extraordinary estimated expenditures were tabled for the second time, after the Council had committed to a delegation from the School Board composed of trustees, W. Walker, A. Peden and H. O. Litchfield. The Council had until March 1 to give the School Board its answer.

EXPLAINS FIRE COSTS

Fire Chief Vernon W. Stewart explained the items called for in his department salaries were passed at $120,372, as compared to $111,014 last year. Maintenance items were passed to the extent of $14,154, while $43,449 was the total of the items laid over for further consideration, mostly allowances. The total fire department estimates call for $178,875, from which sum $712 was cut and $48,640. Library estimates were passed at $23,460, which $11,190 is for salaries, $7,200 for books, periodicals and binding, and $3,070 for maintenance.

MARKET RENOVATION

Provision for the Public Market, and fair weights and measures was asked for in the sum of $7,680, as compared to $3,478 the year before. Of this sum $2,700 included for the rearrangement of the stalls in the market was tabled, while approximately $1,400 was struck out.

Provision for the Old Men's Home was asked in the sum of $18,153, including $3,000 for extension of the assembly room with bedroom space on the top floor. The estimate passed with the exception of the extension to the building, which was tabled.

In dealing with provision for charities the committee ratified an expenditure of $26,250 with very little change.

The grant to the Y.M.C.A. was tabled, the suggestion being made that the Association be given the amount of its back taxes, thus making it tax free until the end of this year.

WOULD INCREASE GRANT

Alderman Woodward made a plea for an enlarged grant to the Victorian Order of Nurses. Doctors were not concerned about expense and often consigned patients to hospital, he believed, without any regard to whether some portion of the cure could not be effected in the homes. The Victorian Order of Nurses were doing work that was proving increasingly valuable and it would pay the city to increase their grant greatly, he thought. The item was tabled.

Provision for the Isolation Hospital was passed at $14,000 being a slight reduction under the actual expenditure of last year. For indigent patients the committee allowed $55,000, a cut of $1,000 from the figures asked, and about $8,000 below expenditure last year.

There was no escape from an item of $4,900 for the Provincial Laboratory, the committee found, and that sum was passed. The laboratory was doing good work, stated Dr. Arthur G. Price, city health officer, in explaining the vote. Salaries in the Board of Health were passed at $8,730, a slight increase from last year.

NO ADDED FACILITIES

There were no added facilities for the two comfort stations maintained by the city, but the committee struck out a suggestion that a new comfort station be built near Douglas and Yates street, and that the existing station be enlarged. Alderman Woodward championed the addition, stating if the city were to cater to conventions and large bodies of visitors some such provision would have to be made. The work would cost $2,500, it was stated, but the grant was refused. The total of $14,645 asked by the Board of Health was passed at about $13,000.

SCHOOL REALLY NEEDED

The school Board delegation explained the new Oaklands school was a necessity. There were fourteen divisions in the present school, with an average of from thirty-seven to thirty-eight students in each class, and a room. The largest class had forty pupils in it, which was far beyond reasonable limits for efficiency, they stated. The four-room permanent addition asked, they said, could be financed in any way the Council saw fit, but it was an absolute necessity. After scattered discussion the committee tabled the item for the second time. School board ordinary estimates call for $54,408 this year, $140,000 of which will come back to the city by way of grants. Extraordinary estimates ask for $18,500, all but $500 of which is for the new school.

HOW TO SPEND THE WINTER RIGHT

In the continual quest for better health and longer life, the old-time belief that Winter is the time to seal up the windows and house on the inside is rapidly being relegated to the host of obsolete notions discarded and dubbed "old-fashioned." The call of the outdoors in the Winter is needed more and more each year, as is evidenced by the increased exodus of "week-enders" from the city to outlying country districts, and by the fact that each year the list of open-air resorts offers a wider choice. And happily so—for what better way is there to combine things healthful and pleasurable in this life of ours than to spend so much time spent in the daily pursuit of material things?

To you who are not yet among the many who know the health-giving joys that Winter affords—and this applies especially to those employed in offices—some day during the week's work has seemed particularly hard, and your brain in sluggish little things annoy you, and you find yourself growing peevish, and incidentally becoming unpopular—dress yourself warmly, not bulky, wear stout, comfortable shoes, take along a congenial companion and if you live in the city take the trolley or train to a place somewhere outside of the city limits and strike out for a fast walk. Never mind the intense cold or the storm that threatens—you won't think of either after you've walked awhile.

If you start off in the morning take some food with you—spend the day in the open. Walk five or ten miles. By that time you'll probably be hungry. Stop at a roadside or farmhouse where you can get a cup of hot tea and a bite to eat; rest a little while after eating—and then walk some more. By that time you'll be feeling like another being and wondering what could possibly have seemed so difficult during the week; your mind will be alert; your eyes sparkling; your cheeks ruddy, and your whole body glowing. Staying indoors will never bring you the lovely features made possible by nature alone. And the quiet that pervades—all this wonderful tonic—not only for the tired body but also for the tired mind. When the day is over you'll appreciate a whole new world more than ever, your bed will seem to you more comfortable, and your sleep will be natural and sound from which you'll awake thoroughly refreshed and ready for the week's wear and tear.

Be a nature lover in the Winter time as well as in the Summer time. Come out of your shell and see what the country looks like in its Winter garb—for Winter is the time that wakes you up and makes you feel that you're alive. Join in all the sports that Winter time offers, and you'll be healthier and happier than you've ever been before.

Canadian Questions and Answers

EARLY IRON MINING IN CANADA

Q. When was iron mining started in Canada?
A. Iron mining in Canada was started at Three Rivers, Quebec, as early as 1667, but the iron seems to have been exported and all manufactured articles imported. In 1733 the first Canadian forge was set up, and in 1737 "La Campagne des Forges" was started, receiving a permit to work the Three Rivers mines without paying dues of any kind.

CONFEDERATION

Q. When was it decided to federate the provinces of Canada into a Dominion?

A. Following many conferences and parliamentary debates, on March 30, 1815, the Parliament of Canada notified the British Parliament that the colonies of Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island were ready for confederation into an entirely self-governing Dominion, which was finally accomplished in 1867.

Violin Classes Give Programme At High School

In the Fall of 1924 the Victoria School Board sanctioned the formation of violin classes in the different schools of the city. Permission was given the use of the schools to hold the classes at the close of the afternoon session at the schools, and two violin instructors, Drury Pryce and George J. Dyke, were appointed. Last evening Mr. Pryce gave a special programme at the High School auditorium, at which twenty or more members of his classes took part. The programme was divided into two parts, the first of which was contributed by the violin classes. The latter by some private pupils. The selections given were as follows: "Melody" (Haydn), "Regent Square" (Lynn Taylor), "Jenny Smith" (Jenny Jones) and "All Through the Night" (two Welsh tunes); "Hebrew Melody" (Minuet) (Dussek), air from the opera "Der Freischütz" (Weber), "Cuban Dance" (Lanico), and "A Legend of Varsovie" (Ashdown). Helen Harris, Reta Smith and Betty Sledge were the soloists, the latter in Beethoven's "Minuet in G" being recalled for her very meritorious rendering of this well-known and favorite melody. Those taking part in the class numbers were: Eugenie Cantwell, Phyllis Hawkes, Arnold Dawkins, Betty Sledge, Helen Harris, Reta Smith, Arthur Davies, Lewis Williams, Mary Cave, Winifred White, Dora Edwards, Elizabeth Scroggie, Jessie Reif, Tom Packford, John Pimm, Alec McKerracher, John Headly, Francis Ross, Beth Dwyer. Mrs. E. S. Foot, an associate instructor, played the class accompaniments.

The second part of the programme was contributed by Dorothy Gibbs, Mary Welch, Betty Corless, Edna McKilloan and Eileen Wilson, Donna White, members of the Equivalents school choir, sang Bland's "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," with violin obbligato by Betty Corless, in a very natural and able manner. The orchestra brought the proceedings to a close by playing in capital style Schumann's "A Little Suite," all these being accompanied by Mrs. Clifford Warren.

There was a good turn-out of people, who throughout the evening gave encouragingly and unstintingly of their applause.

Melton Mowbray, Eng., Feb. 20.—The Prince of Wales is back in the saddle. Undeterred by his recent fall, in which he suffered a fracture of his left collarbone, he joined the members of the Blankney Hunt and followed the hounds to-day. His collarbone is said to have knitted nicely.

Rub Away Baby's Colds

A Boon to Mothers

Mothers everywhere who realize the danger to delicate little stomachs of too much dosing appreciate the value of Vicks in treating croup and children's colds.

With Vicks there is nothing to swallow—you just rub it on. The body heat releases the ingredients—Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme, Turpentine—in the form of vapors which carry the medication directly to the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

$50 A MONTH GIVEN WIDOWER BY COURT

In Vancouver J. A. Dickie, Cut Off by Wife's Will, Now to Share Estate

Vancouver, Feb. 20.—James Alexander Dickie, whose late wife operated a millinery establishment here and whose will cut her husband off with $1 of an estate valued at $28,000, succeeded yesterday before Chief Justice Hunter in claiming an order for maintenance of $50 a month to be paid out of the estate.

A release of his rights under the Testators' Family Maintenance Act was held by the chief justice to have been signed by a man who was either ill, illiterate or just getting over "a jag."

A. E. Beck, K.C., for the executor, opposed the allowance on the ground that Dickie was of bad character and able to support himself. The bad character was based on the fact that in 1910 he had been named as co-respondent in a divorce action and in an alleged assault case which Mr. Beck admitted was not a "grievous" one.

LUCKY WOMEN
"It was only once, anyway," commented the chief justice. "The average woman is lucky if she never gets more than one crack from her husband."

As to the misconduct, the chief justice ruled that had been condoned by the wife continuing to live with him for sixteen years afterwards. "It looks as if she thought the best thing to do was to tolerate him around the place the same as she would a dog or cat," commented the justice.

"I'm not going to throw him out in the street now if she supported him for sixteen years in spite of that misconduct."

Reginald Tupper, for Dickie, submitted his client was absolutely destitute.

Socks to Shipwrecked Sailors
The regular meeting of the Equivalents branch of the Sailors' Guild was held on Thursday at the Sailors' Club. The president, Mrs. Cave, occupied the chair. General business was discussed and it was arranged for a home cooking stall to be held in Spencer's on February 20, also for a masquerade dance on March 11. The Ladies' Guild also donated thirteen pairs of socks to the shipwrecked crew of the Artemesia.

The father-like son—they both like it!

AT THE THEATRES

STAGE PRODUCTION
AT PLAYHOUSE FULL OF FUN AND HUMOR

One of the funniest stage productions ever presented in Victoria, "Belinda's Bad Behaviour" is the stage attraction at the Playhouse. All the controversy is about the sum of $400,000, a will and two children to be adopted. Aunt Amelia figures out how she can become wealthy, and she sets out after the money in earnest. But her plans suddenly and surprisingly are interrupted by an exciting complication which occurs. The drama in the life of the dissolute but lovable Prince Michael of Russia and of Paris, with beautiful women, gay parties, easy morals and finally his regeneration through his love for a little dancing girl and the tragedy of his brother's death, is perfectly portrayed by Lowell Sherman, now playing on the Playhouse screen.

"THE TIMBER WOLF,"
NOW AT COLUMBIA, IS FULL OF THRILLS

For thrills and speed; virile drama, enacted by competent players, "The Timber Wolf" starring Buck Jones, popular William Fox actor, takes the cake. This fast moving outdoor drama is showing at the Columbia. The story is by Jackson Gregory, interesting author of western fiction. While the locale of this story is a logging camp, the same solid quality of his gripping western stories has been injected into the tale with startling results. The story is of a man of the north woods—this owner of vast timber lands—whose rugged methods of dealing with men has earned him the name of Timber Wolf. A mine, hidden in a mysterious canyon, crooks and a dishonest sheriff figure importantly in the action. With such a combination a multitude of action is bound to result. In fact, "The Timber Wolf" exceeds the wildest expectations.

PAINTING OCCUPIES SPARE MOMENTS OF
RUDOLPH VALENTINO

Rudolph Valentino is learning to paint. His tutor is none other than Frederico Beltrami-Massey, court painter of Spain, who has been the star's house guest and who painted three pictures of him. "Valentino has unusual talent," says Beltrami-Massey. "It is extraordinary in fact, that a man without previous training should be able to paint as well as he does. I think it is because he has the artistic soul." Valentino's talents as an actor are displayed to excellent advantage in "The Eagle," a Clarence Brown production which is proving a great drawing card at the Dominion Theatre. In this Russian picture the star is seen as a Cossack lieutenant who turns bandit. The story, which is full of both drama and comedy, is based on "Dubrovsky," a Russian classic by Alexander Pushkin. Hans Kraly wrote the scenario.

Valma Banky, "The Hungarian Rhapsody," plays opposite Valentino. Louise Dresser has a featured role as the middle-aged Carina who tries to vamp the star.

THRILLING PICTURE
MAGNET AT COLISEUM

To-night is the last night that the great laugh-winning farce "Damfino" and the thrilling moving picture "The Lighthouse by the Sea" will be presented at the Coliseum. Crowds have laughed uproariously at the clever radio comedy and the singing numbers which are interpolated have been received with rounds of applause. Encores have been frequent every night. Will Marshall and Frank Allwood have teamed up as comedians who have kept the audiences rocking with laughter while in the big scenes the whole company has worked together perfectly. "The Lighthouse by the Sea" is a Warner Brothers' thriller. It is a Warner Brothers' classic featuring Rin-Tin-Tin, the wonder dog, and is a gripping romance written around the adventures of a shipwrecked hero who takes the part of the aged lighthouse keeper and his daughter in their battle with rum-runners. It is full of action.

THE ALL-CANADA SUPPLEMENT
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Will be published on Friday, April 16. This supplement will contain news and advertising matter bearing upon all phases of Canadian life from the Atlantic to the Pacific and will have a world-wide circulation.

Mr. J. M. Healy, 111 Pemberton Building, the Advertising Representative of the Christian Science Monitor will call upon the business houses of the city with a view to securing advertising material.

The Empire Parliamentary delegation went to Jamaica on the S.S. Changuinola at the same time as Miss Balfour was outward bound to make exterior for "Satan's Sister," which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre. The journey was enlivened by the captain and the crew teaching Betty naval tricks, which she needed for her film. The Parliamentary delegation became most interested and accepted an invitation to the studios to witness the screening of some of the interior scenes of the film. Lady Mary and Lady Elizabeth Byng, daughters of the Earl and Countess of Stafford, actually took part in the scene. The other visitors included The Earl and Countess of Stafford, Lord and Lady Newton, Lord and Lady Hampton, Lady Howard Spicer, Hon. C. G. Ammon, M.P., Robt. Boothby, the youngest M.P., and Mr. Ponting, the explorer.

CROWDED HOUSE
DUMBELLS' REVUE

"Lucky Seven" One of Best Entertainments Ever Given;
Repeated To-night

It is seven years since The Dumbells first came to Victoria, and from that date their annual visits to this city have been heralded by theatre-goers as among the most welcome harbingers of Spring. During the whole of that time their revues have lost none of their originality and with each passing year the members of this clever company seem to grow more entertaining and more versatile. Their latest revue, "Lucky Seven," is undoubtedly the best in every way that they have ever staged, and it is gratifyingly that this clever aggregation of ex-service men are pastmasters in the art of entertaining.

A crowded house at the Royal Victoria Theatre last evening gave spontaneous and hearty welcome to The Dumbells, each member being singled out for warm applause as he appeared. Capt. Plunkett acknowledged the welcome with a little speech, during the evening, and took the occasion to announce that they would be returning in two weeks' time with an entirely different show entitled "Three Bags Full."

"Lucky Seven" is a sparkling show and goes with a snap from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The entrance of the company is effected in clever fashion, each member stepping from a huge dice showing the seven black dots, and from that point the show is a succession of brilliant turns. The audience laughed and applauded with such enthusiasm as almost to stop the show on several occasions, particularly in the scenes in which Pat Rafferty revealed his imitable gifts as a comedian. His parody on "The Prisoner Song" and the number, "I'm Not All There" were two of the funniest hits of the evening.

Red Newman and Ben Allan shared the honors with Pat Rafferty as fun-makers, the former being capped by causing in the war-time scene in a French estaminet. "Let's Start the War Again" and "Colonel Thinsamabob" both proved riotous favorites.

One of the funniest scenes in the whole show is that in which four slatternly women (Red Newman, Morley Plunkett, Pat Rafferty and Stan Bennett) are shown cleaning the steps in front of a row of houses, combed of laughter being created by their song, "Us Girls Must Have Their Fun." Another hit is the scene on top of a London bus, the various characters including the bus driver and conductor, an anaemic-looking curate, his wife, a lady with a hare-lip and a noisy schoolboy. Stan Bennett was another comedian of the English Johnny type, his best songs including "I Stopped, I Looked, I Listened."

Ross Hamilton is a more beautiful maiden than ever, wearing ravishing gowns and dazzling jewelry. Glad Allan dances with amazing grace and lightness, and Al Plunkett is as much of a favorite as ever in his song-scenes.

The second act is given over to Capt. Plunkett and his orchestra which plays jazz and classical music with equal facility and brilliance. The instrumental numbers are interspersed with songs and dances by various members of the company, including Jimmy Devon, Ben Hamilton, "Jack" Allan, a fascinating blonde, Harold Rich and others. The revue will be repeated to-night and well deserves another capacity house.

Cougars Crush Edmonton Aside, 4-1

Spectacular Speed Of Champions Overwhelms All Esks But Stuart

Young Goalie All That Saved Victoria for Piling up Huge Score; Edmonton Found Cougars at Top of Their Form and Seldom Had Anything to Say About the Game, Except in Use of Wood; Most Thrilling Game of Season

Frank Foyston, blonde and bashful relief centre-ice man of the Victoria Cougars, slipped the puck home for a goal here last night soon after the second period had opened and started the Edmonton Eskimos on the skidway for a bad beating. After Foyston had found the secret of beating Herb Stuart, the jumping-jack goalie of the visitors, he tipped off Hart, Oatman and Fredrickson, and they made the goal umpires wave their hands high aloft. All of which means that the world's champions scored four goals. Just a minute before the end of the game the Cougars lashed about the ice like beauties at Palm Beach and the Eskimos rallied one goal, their only reward for a tough evening's work.

Edmonton were seldom dangerous except when it came to welding their sticks. It looked as though most of them had served an apprenticeship in a butcher shop for they handled their sticks like choppers. Shore and Boucher were particularly effective in the methods of slashing. Both were lucky that referee Jon did not step on them more often.

A PUCK SHOWER

The Cougars were like dynamite. They gave Mr. Stuart the hottest time he had this season. The young goalie was showered with pucks like confetti. To his credit it must be said that he did his best to save his club, but when the defence fell down in front of him, his forwards halted in their back-checking and he was left alone to stem the tide it was too much to ask him to be a second Mussolini.

During the first period Stuart stopped exactly twenty shots and practically all of them were from inside the defence. Three times he sprawled on the ice to block Lester Patrick after the veteran had left the Eskimos defence flat on its back. Twice he met wicked shots from Foyston and once the blonde hit the post. Oatman and Fredrickson both went in on top of him but he smothered their shots with well-timed dives.

SKATED THEM TO DEATH

The Cougars, using their two sets of forwards, skated the Eskimos into harness in the first period. Every time Keats, Gagne or Shore tried to start a play the champions leaped on them and skated them into the goal. Only eight direct shots were fired at Holmes.

The desperate efforts of Edmonton to keep company with Victoria and prevent an old-time massacre told on them in the second period. Less than two minutes after the bell Walker drew the Edmonton defence ever to the left and then he passed to Foyston, who was wide open. Stuart put up his hands as if he had never seen a puck before.

Fredrickson just stepped back on the ice to relieve Foyston when he started the Edmonton defence and when forced behind, passed out to Hart for another goal.

Then went the Cougars again, time and again battling right in the Edmonton goal-mouth only to have Stuart pull a remarkable save. Walker led in another assault and gave Fredrickson a pass. The latter carried past the goal, but gave the puck to Oatman in front and the puck slipped between Stuart's pads.

THE FISTIC EXHIBITION

Keats came into the picture for the only time of the game. He attempted a rush but Oatman kept him well over to the boards. Keats jabbed Oatman and in an instant the pair were rolling and yelling like a couple of loggers. Other players flocked in and prevented most of the fans from seeing the real battle. When referee Jon did step into the ring to speak the scolding words, his remarks were briefly these: "The rest of the game for both of 'em." And so departed Keats, the colorful gent, who had the populace on fire on his back as he skated for his street clothes.

For a few moments towards the close of the period Eddie Shore, the falling leaf defence star of the visitors, threw a few fits into the Cougars and Holmes had to check through with startling clearances to keep him from scoring. In this period Victoria laid the puck on Stuart fourteen times, while Holmes attempted to hit him.

Fresh from a brief rest in the third period, Fredrickson staged a spectacular rush and with Stanley chopping away at his feet, let fly a flashing back-hand shot. Stuart missed the puck completely.

LESTER BEATEN AGAIN

The Cougars continued to jazz the Eskimos, but the charmed territory presided over by Stuart escaped further damage. Lester Patrick tried twice again to sneak the puck by the little fellow, but each time he was beaten. Once Lester let Foyston have the puck and he scored, but it was ruled offside. Hart made a number of dazzling rushes and Walker worked like a Turk, but it was not to be.

Edmonton did their most effective work on the offensive in the expiring moments of the game. Shore and

SIDELIGHTS

It wasn't such a close game but, girls, what a thriller. The fans got more kick out of it than out of any other game this season. Some of them couldn't go to sleep until early this morning for turning over the event of the evening in their minds.

The Cougars showed like true champions. Take a champion thoroughbred, boxer, football eleven or rugby team, and they will show the punch in the home stretch. It's the courage and fight that makes champions.

The Cougars won the championship last year through a killing ride in the stretch. This year they were beset by injuries and unlucky breaks but their hearts held stout and now, as they approach full strength, nothing can hold them.

In the last fifteen games the Cougars have only been beaten three times. At the rate they are going now they should polish off the season with a record that equals the one they set last year when they were not beaten in their last eleven games.

It might be appropriate to point out here that the Cougars' drive started when Lester Patrick returned to the game. He seemed to get the boys together and Foyston's return further energized the club. Lester should have had a couple of goals in the first period. A hail was all that saved his first rush from bringing a goal.

It's peculiar that this fellow Keats should pull his objectionable stunt when he is leading his club to a win. As long as his club is in the battle he pays strict attention to business. When the Cougars scored the upper end of last night Keats picked trouble with Oatman. He took on a rugged youngster and got more than he was looking for.

Keats has boasted his total penalties for the season to nearly 150 minutes. He is the "bad man" of the Eskimos. It is too bad that he ruins his ability by resorting to such bad displays of temper. Keats is a great hockey player, but he spoils his work by his masterly work. He should think more of his club. Whenever he is banished from the ice Edmonton is greatly weakened.

Shore also ran wild with his stick. He makes no attempt to conceal his rough stuff. Shore and Fredrickson were at logger heads all night and the latter drew a penalty for a deliberate slash across the back of Shore.

Referee Jon would have been well within his rights had he chased more players off for slashing. A stick in the hands of a hot-headed player is a dangerous weapon. The stick is given to each man to guide the puck, not to chop at the legs, body or head of an opponent.

There were many high-lights in the Cougars' performance. Their speed stood out, while the Walker-Foyston combination was a bright spot. Lester Patrick's steady rushes, Fredrickson's fine stick-handling, Oatman's rushing of the net and Hart's drives with his head down, thrilled the crowd time and again. Holmes also turned in his usual steady performance, while Loughlin and Anderson did a lot of hard skating.

"Spunk" Sparrow was the best of the last time he played here he was with Calgary. He has shifted about from many clubs.

The Cougars made a resolution after last night's game to go after the next four games. They want to win all four and try to take first place. Eight more points would give them thirty-six points in the final standing and that would be enough, even if it did not nose out Saskatoon, to prevent the Shells from winning by five points.

The standing of the W.H.L. is as follows:

	P.W.L.	T	F	A	P.
Saskatoon	24	15	8	1	56	31
Victoria	25	12	10	4	55	48
Edmonton	24	14	10	0	52	28
Portland	23	10	11	2	48	28
Vancouver	24	9	12	2	53	28
Calgary	23	8	14	3	57	65

Hockey so Popular In Boston, Arena to Be Enlarged at Once

Boston, Mass., Feb. 20.—Because of the popularity of the professional hockey games, the directors of the Boston Arena have decided to install a balcony with additional seating capacity of 3,000. It was announced yesterday. With the addition, the rink will have accommodation for 11,000 fans.

WITH THE BOWLERS

The Eagles won from the Night Hawks in the Commercial League last when they took two out of the three games. Fairall was top man for the Eagles, while Huxtable led the Hawks with 615. The scores:

Another French Tennis Victor

JEAN BOROTRA

New York, Feb. 20.—"Borotra at his best is a great player and he was at his best yesterday," William Tilden declared today. The American champion gave full credit to his conqueror in the singles match played Friday.

Borotra defeated Tilden in straight sets, 13-11 and 6-3. Tilden mixed his terrific forehand drive with what seemed a baffling chop, but the ball came back to him with an unerring accuracy that piled up the points for the Frenchman. At the net Borotra raced through the forecourt to cut down Tilden's returns with crisp, sharply angled volleys—and there were few games in which the champion of 1925 failed to reach the corded barrier. Tilden finally went to his lob, but Borotra was even more dependable overhead than on the ground, smashing the ball with terrific speed into the American's court.

Rene Lacoste, another French star, conquered Vincent Richards, No. 3 in the U.S. tennis ranking, 6-4 and 6-2, while Jean Brugnon, the third member of the French team, eliminated Francis T. Hunter, 6-4 and 6-4.

The triple victory of the French, following closely upon Suzanne Lenglen's win over Helen Wills, the American champion, has caused a great furor here.

Star Hawaiian Swimmer To Give Exhibition In City

The Victoria swimming fraternity will have an opportunity to see in action the wonder girl swimmer of Honolulu, Marichan Wehseleu, who will be in the city about March 8. Like the rest of the natives of Hawaii, she has been a swimmer since a baby and now, at the age of seventeen, she is holder of the world's record for 100 yards and the Olympic championship for the 100-metre dash. Her time for the 100 yards is 1:02 minutes while she does the 100 metres in 1:02 minutes and 10 seconds more. Mrs. Putard, well-known in this city, who is now a resident of Honolulu, will be chaperon of Miss Wehseleu.

The Victoria Amateur Swimming Club is arranging a gala at the Crystal Garden when the Hawaiian girl swims. In connection with her visit the V.A.S.C. will stage a gala at the Crystal Garden and many local swimmers will compete.

Two weeks after Miss Wehseleu's visit to the city the P.N.A. championships will be held here. All the cities will be well represented in this event. Portland promises to send about eighteen of her best and Seattle and Vancouver will have contingents here. It is hoped that arrangements can be made for the erection of a five-metre board at the Crystal Garden in order to hold the popular five-metre diving event, which always draws a large number of entrants.

Oak Bay and Local High Soccer Teams Will Play Monday

Victoria and Oak Bay High School soccer teams will meet Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Royal Athletic Park. To play their first game in the Thompson Cup series, Monday's game promises to be a very interesting one, as all previous encounters have shown that both teams are very evenly matched.

Miss Sayward Wins

Dei Monte, Cal., Feb. 20.—Miss M. Sayward of Victoria and H. Fleishacker Jr. of Stanford, yesterday won the mixed foursome golf tournament here. They led Mrs. F. Shady of San Francisco and Dick Lang of Seattle, a member of the Stanford golf team, by one stroke.

Carpet Bowling

Results in the Carpet Bowling League this week were as follows: St. Johns 19, Willows C-19, Irupa 17, Burnside 20, Willows B 17, St. Marks 15, Saanich 20, Willows "A" 15. The feature of the week's play was the "drag" between the Willows C and St. John's for the second time this season. St. John's also distinguished itself by defeating the leaders by one shot.

Champion Hurdler To Join the Guards

London, Feb. 20.—Lord Burleigh, England's champion hurdler, has announced on reaching his majority that he intends to take a permanent commission in the Grenadier Guards.

Simpson's Goal In Overtime Gives N.Y. Win Over Pittsburgh

Americans Fall Before the Pirates; Joe Drives Home Rebound From Own Shot

Pittsburgh, Feb. 20.—After a string of fourteen consecutive defeats the New York Americans broke their streak at the expense of Pittsburgh here last night, 3 to 2 in a grueling hockey game. A dazzling shot by Joe Simpson in the final period proved the deciding factor.

Less than three minutes of the third period was needed when Simpson took the puck from mid-ice, stood about ten feet in front of the net and shot. Worters shook it off, but Simpson followed up his heroics and before Worters had time to return, had the disc nestling in the mesh.

Both teams scored once apiece in the first two periods. The Giants took the lead through the able work of McKinnon in the opening session, only to have Vette even the count in the second stanza.

McCurry gave Pittsburgh the jump. Burch, New York ace, soon knocked the score again by a brilliant shot.

First period—1, New York, McKinnon, 9:30; 2, Pittsburgh, White, 9:32. Second period—3, Pittsburgh, McCurry, 15:35; 4, New York, Burch, 19. Third period—5, New York, Simpson, 24:46.

Spalding Team in Town For Great Game To-night at Y.M.C.A.

The Seattle boat-to-day brought to town the A. G. Spalding basketball team of Seattle, which is to try conclusions with the fast-paced Falcons quintette at the Y.M.C.A. to-night.

The visitors have not yet announced their lineup, but the following will likely start: Capt. Vin McDuthson and Wilson Gaw, guards; West Hall, centre; Hughie McDonald and Paul Forsythe, forwards; Wally Howe will relieve the defence men, Ed Huletz, the centre; George Salrus, forward. This will give them a strong team with a good set of substitutes.

Coach Gordon Forbes of the Falcons has not committed himself as to what team he will start, but he has three dependable forwards in Bill Murray, Randy Tervo, and Doug Robertson. Capt. Jack McKenzie and Joe Ross are nearly certain of their places. Wally Sillings and Ross Haggard will be at the centre positions.

The preliminary game should be a stunner judging from the rivalry between the teams. This game will start promptly at 8 o'clock. The international game will follow immediately after.

At a late hour last night there were very few tickets left, and these can be procured at the Y.M.C.A.

Lady Byng Inquires After Vezina, Great Canadian Goalkeeper

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Lady Byng, who was present at Thursday night's National Hockey League game at Ottawa between the Canadiens and Senators, sent a note to Manager Leo Dandurand of the Canadiens after the second period sympathizing with him on the loss of George Vezina, former goaltender on the French Canadian club, and inquiring as to his present condition. In the note Lady Byng asked that her sympathies be extended to Mrs. Vezina and her message be carried to George himself.

George Vezina is still undergoing treatment for the illness which caused his retirement from hockey at the beginning of the present season.

Rockland Academy Defeat University

By a score of 4-3, Rockland Academy defeated the University School in a practice rugby match on Thursday at Mount-Tomlin.

Johnson, of the Academy, scored on a field goal in the midst of an attack which his team mates undertook about the middle of the first half. The University School fought back to even the score, but they could not. Eventually, however, they got a free kick near their opponents' posts and attempted a long drop, the kick being successful.

This was Rockland Academy's first win this year.

ROLLER HOCKEY

Two roller hockey games will be played in the Victoria and District Roller Hockey League to-night at the Victoria West gymnasium. The games will start at 7:15 sharp.

The games will be as follows: 80 pounds—Foul Bay vs. Rock Bay; 110 pounds—Hill's Corner vs. Willows Canucks.

Tommy Milligan is Given Verdict Over Zivic in Return Bout

New York, Feb. 20.—Tommy Milligan, Scotch welterweight champion, evened his score with Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh in a ten-round match at Madison Square Garden last night when he was given a judge's verdict after a torrid match.

The fight was a slug-fest affair with both men bleeding from the nose and mouth but on their feet hammering away with both hands.

Fine Combination Of Towers Beat The Shells

Vancouver Amateur Champions Gain Four-goal Lead on Victoria Titleholders in First Game; Locals Not in Condition to Stand Pace Towards Close; Towers First Goal Resulted From Offside; Harry Stuart, Local Goalie, Stars

Vancouver, Feb. 20.—Unleashing a mystifying combination that had the Victoria Shells baffled at almost every stage of the game, the Towers, Vancouver City hockey champions, ran through the crack Islanders to a tune of 6-2 before nearly 2,100 people at the Arena last night. Thus the winners go to Victoria Monday night for the second game with a lead of four goals. Victoria were the first to score but after the first period when the count ended 1-1, there was never much doubt of the ultimate outcome.

TOWERS' WHIRLWINDS

Seaforths provided the real surprise of the night when they held the Colonists, who finished second in the Victoria league, to a 3-3 draw. Both teams played snappy hockey, but raising dashes from end-to-end featuring this battle from the opening whistle.

Towers played like a real hockey team and displayed by far their best form of the season. The combined well together and from the outset kept up a steady running fire on Stuart, the Victoria netminder.

It was no fault of Stuart that six pucks were pulled out of the help behind him. He made seemingly impossible saves and kept the crowd on its toes by the sensational manner in which he jumped from side to side to throw a pad in front of a whirling puck. Towers from the opening whistle started their two and three-man offensive which usually ended up by a short burst from the side. While Hughie Burnett and Roy Copas, veterans of many an inter-city battle, played well they were not the equal to the defence of Brolin and Wickson of the home team.

For the winners the bright particular stars were Bert Blair, playing his first game of the season, and Allan Fellew who turned in his best game of the season by long odds. He engineered the great majority of goal scoring plays, finding the net on three occasions while he also got an assist.

LACKED CONDITION

For the Islanders Miller, Mummery, Sanders and Burnett were the pick. The entire team appeared to be lacking in condition as compared with the locals.

Victoria played their best hockey in the first period when they held the locals to a 1-1 count on goals by Ross MacLean and Allan Fellew. From the start of the second session, Towers were always in front and steadily increased their lead on goals by Blair, Wickson and Fellew. The winners added two more in the third from the sticks of Thompson and Fellew, while Mummery, one of the famous family of eastern hockey stars, bagged the only counter for the locals.

Seaforths deserve great credit for their excellent showing against the older and more experienced Colonists. They were unfortunate in that they were not allowed one goal. As in the senior affair the teams battled of even terms in the opening period. Seaforths appeared nervous and missed several fine chances in front of the help net. Burnett, man scored first for the visitors but this was equalized by Ross MacLean of the home team.

The line-up for the senior game was as follows: Towers, Blair, Thompson, Allan Fellew, C. Dowman, Blair, Grimmett.

Shells—Stuart, Burnett, Copas, Mummery, Sanders, Miller, Foster, Johnson.

GOAL SUMMARY

First period—1, Victoria Shells, Miller, 4:00; 2, Towers, 17:40. Second period—2, Towers, Blair, 7:16; 4, Towers, Wickson, 11:19; 5, Towers, Fellew, from Grimmett, 6:55.

Third period—6, Towers, Thompson, 4:46; 7, Shells, Mummery, 6:55; 8, Towers, Allan Fellew, from Blair, 6:50.

PENALTIES

First period—Burnett, 2 minutes. Second period—Wickson, 2 minutes. Third period—None.

This line-up for the intermediate game was as follows:

Seaforths—Ireland, Gage, McLean, McGill, Drake, Craigen, M. Queen and D. A. Macdonald.

Colonists—Campbell, Goodacre, Smith, Temple, Oatman, Wilson, Stewart, Belcher.

GOAL SUMMARY

First period—Colonists, Oatman, 2:07; Seaforths, McLean, 2:39. Second period—Colonists, McGill from Drake, 3:27; Colonists, Stewart, 10:03; Seaforths, Gage, 1:17. Third period—Colonists, Stewart, 10:47.

PENALTIES

First period—Gage, two minutes. Second period—Wilson, Temple, McGill, 2 minutes each. Third period—McGill, 12; Temple (2); Gage, Stewart, Goodacre, two minutes each.

Fail To Develop Self-reliance And Judgment As Singles

H. Vardon Thinks Players Make Shots in Irresponsible Frame of Mind

Bisques Creeping Steadily Into Favor; "Sunningdale Handicapping" is New

By HARRY VARDON

A correspondent writes to ask if I can explain exactly what is meant by a phrase which he saw recently in a newspaper: "Sunningdale handicapping." I think it is possible to enlighten him.

The term refers to a rather entertaining way of ensuring a close match when two players are of very different degrees of ability—one perhaps, about scratch and the other long handicap—and do not fancy the ordinary system of giving and receiving strokes at prescribed holes. Certain—it is that, under this latter method, the inferior golfer often finds that he does not secure full value for his strokes. Some of them are wasted, because he loses the holes so badly that his allowance at them is of no avail.

Precisely why Sunningdale, an important and serious-minded club, is held to be the sponsor of the scheme to which my correspondent refers, I do not know. Anyhow, the name serves.

CONCEDING STROKES
The idea is that the player who is "up" is to concede at the hole which is about to be played a number of strokes corresponding to the number of holes by which he is leading. Thus, if he was the first hole, he has to give a stroke at the second. If he secures the second hole as well, he has to give two strokes at the third. It stands to reason that he cannot go on for long piling up penalties for himself and carrying them successfully.

If by some wizardry he wins the first five holes in spite of the fact that he has given an extra stroke at every succeeding hole, the sum total of his performance must be to hand him an awkward predicament, for he has to concede five strokes at the sixth.

Assuming he loses the sixth and has his lead reduced to four, he still has to give four strokes at the seventh.

Certainly you could not very well have a one-sided match under this principal of handicapping. Personally I am rather chary of these contests in which the longer the lead you obtain, the more you have to give your rival. The idea looks all right on paper. If you run right away from your opponent, it is a case of concession to him if you are so far animated with the sporting spirit that you want to engage in a close finish. Only you are apt to be caught, as I was once by an amateur in Yorkshire.

I was fix up on him at the turn. I had arranged to give him a stroke a hole all the way round, and, in addition, as I stood bisques coming home as I stood bisques coming home. Thus I had a pretty little stroke round my neck for the home-ward half, and only just managed to finish all square.

FOUR-BALL MATCHES
Another correspondent inquires as to whether I think four-ball matches are as bad for one's golf.

I have nothing to say against the four-ball match when those who take part in it are skilful and experienced players who know their own powers and are not likely to be misled by what happens, but I am sure it is a hindrance to less-advanced golfers. When it is played, the best way for the two persons constituting a side to decide between themselves from time to time when one shall attempt a brilliant shot in the hope of winning the hole, while the other shall play steadily with the object of ensuring at least half.

This form of tactics is very seldom introduced; as a rule, each of the four participants ploughs a more or less lonely furrow until the putting green is reached, whereupon everybody concerned reckons in the terms of having "this for a four," or whatever the figure may be. There is scope for real co-operation in the four-ball match, but very little advantage is taken of it.

BAD FOR MODERATE PLAYERS
For the moderate player, probably the worst form of practice is the four-ball match. It is more likely than any other kind of contest to induce him to attempt things that are impossible to him and also to cause him to depend upon a partner instead of himself.

But how many fewer? My experience is that where the players are fairly evenly matched, the one who engages in singles, and who gives half the number of bisques that he would concede in strokes. Thus, if the ordinary allowance were six strokes, he might give three bisques. Where, however, a great disparity exists between the players, the short-handicap man can usually give a larger proportion of bisques. Thus, if he would have to concede six strokes in the ordinary match, he should be able to give ten bisques.

If I were in receipt of bisques, I would use them early if they would win holes. The temptation to keep them up one's sleeve for a close finish may be strong, but often it is not. I once played a man who, through not spending some bisques early enabled me to keep level with him. We arrived on the last teeing ground all even. He then had four bisques in hand. But from his tee shot he lost his ball and with it the match. That was a shock to him, which he did not forget in a hurry.

PAOLINI, THE SPANISH WOODCHOPPER, HAS A TERRIFIC PUNCH

Annual Meeting of Racing Pigeon Club Held in Vancouver

Interesting Talk Given by President; Provincial Derby Arranged

At the Provincial Racing Pigeon Club's annual meeting held in Vancouver, the following officers were elected: President, A. Dickie; secretary, F. Entwright; treasurer, G. Hardiman; all of Vancouver; vice-president for the lower island, W. Simpson of Victoria; W. Bryon declining nomination in his favor; vice-president for the upper island, T. Naylor of Nanaimo.

After the election of officers President Dickie distributed the prizes won at the late Provincial Derby, a 500-mile race, W. E. Bryan of Victoria was the winner of the race, the first time for a Victoria bird to win premier honors. He won the McKay and White challenge cup, the McLaren challenge cup and three medals that go yearly with the above cups.

The Provincial Derby will be held again this year from Sissona, California, July 3. A number of good special prizes will be donated again by Vancouver business men.

HOFF ONE OF WORLD'S MOST VERSATILE ATHLETES

Norwegian, Now on Visit to United States, Has Hung up Noteworthy Records in Fourteen Events; Best Pole Vaulter in World

EUROPE'S greatest all-round athlete, Charles Hoff, is now in America on a three months' athletic invasion. While the lad from Norway has gained most of his fame as a pole vaulter (he holds the record for the event), he's also a notable pastime in the sprints, middle-distance runs, high broad and high, step and jump performances, shot-put, discus, javelin and hurdles.

In fact, when an athlete has built up the proficiency in fourteen different events, it's a pretty good record. Hoff is a versatile performer. He is twenty-three, is pretty much in a class by himself. A glance at the records he has established in various events—fourteen of them—shows his wonderful versatility.

The Norwegian has become a popular performer in America. Far more so than was that other distinguished invader, Paavo Nurmi.

Hoff is a vastly different type. He's a smiling, good-natured individual, with a sense of humor. Contrary to general belief, he speaks English well, if not fluently. In a word, he should gain unusual favor for an invader during his sojourn.

In case you don't know, Hoff's world record for the pole-vault is 13 feet, 11 1/2 inches, just shy of the 14-foot mark. Not so many years back 12 feet was considered enough to win in any competition. Hoff has cleared almost two feet higher than that and hopes to push the bar a bit more skyward ere he returns.

It's fairly easy to see why the Norwegian is the greatest vaulter of them all. To be a star in the event you must, as a rule, have height, long legs, long arms and not too much weight. In fact, as a prominent coach once remarked, "You almost need to be a living skeleton to star as a pole-vaulter."

In appearances in New York Hoff has set new indoor records on the pole vault without removing either his sweater or trousers.

Joe Bush Passes To Washington And Is Regular Traveler

Famous Fork-ball Pitcher Will Help Harris Bring Washington Through Again

By BILLY EVANS

Joe Bush certainly believes in seeing America first via the baseball route.

Bush, recently traded by St. Louis to Washington, will be playing with his fifth American League club when he joins the champions.

Like a lot of other stars, Bush was discovered by Cornelius Mack. He cost Sir Connie all of $800 Iron men. One of his scouts, wandering around Missoula, Mont., saw Bush pitch and immediately bought him.

Bush spent five years with Mack, who passed him on to the Boston Red Sox. His next ticket read New York, where he tarried for three years, taking part in two world series. He pitched great ball in 1922, the year the Yankees beat the Giants for the world title.

Deserting the East for the West, Bush spent last season in St. Louis. Now he comes back as a member of the Washington team, which completes his tour of the eastern end of the circuit.

Bush, during the first six years of his major-league career, won fame because of his great speed. He was known as "Bullet Joe" Bush.

After his transfer to the Boston club, Bush was of little use, due to an injury to his pitching arm. Unable to baffle the batter with the old-time blinding speed, Bush resorted to cunning in an effort to prolong his career.

Not being called upon to do any pitching, Bush spent hours experimenting with freak deliveries. He mastered what he called the fork ball. Invented the long rest (he was out an entire season) brought back much of the old-time speed.

Bush has a rather peculiar hand; his fingers are so widely separated that it is possible for him to grip the ball between the first two fingers, and then deliver it in such a way that it breaks much after the manner of a spitball.

Bush came back strong. In fact, looked so good that the New York Americans, desirous of strengthening the pitching staff, paid $25,000 to get him.

So effective was the fork ball that a number of American League pitchers should help Harris in his effort to land another pennant. While he hasn't the burning speed of old, his fast ball still hops a bit and he's smart.

They say youth must be served in sport, but that doesn't go for the Washington pitching staff. Of the four regulars, Johnson, Coveleske, Bush and Reuther, the last named is the youngest, thirty-two years of age.

popular performer with track and field followers in America. Far more so than was that other distinguished invader, Paavo Nurmi.

the flying Finn. Nurmi was a tactician sort of fellow, hard to warm up to. He kept more or less out of the way of his admirers; seemed bent on dodging those who gloried in his feats, those who would pay him homage.

Hoff is a vastly different type. He's a smiling, good-natured individual, with a sense of humor. Contrary to general belief, he speaks English well, if not fluently. In a word, he should gain unusual favor for an invader during his sojourn.

Dempsey Only Hits Half As Hard As Spaniard

Robert Edgren Tells of Interesting Situations Which Have Arisen Over Surprise Punches; Cyclone Kelly Sprung Good One on Carter and Black Bill and Willard Once Launched Furious Right;

Ketchel and Gans Had Scientific Knockouts

By ROBERT EDGREN

Paolino Fezulan, the Basque, known as "The Spanish Woodchopper," is said to be the hardest hitter in the world. Surely, there's no man in the ring to-day better built for hard hitting. The Woodchopper has a heavy, flat, long-jawed head set on a neck so thick that it bulged out beyond his ears. His shoulders are extraordinarily wide and sloping. The muscles from neck to shoulders are heavy and the deltoids unusually large, giving him the appearance of a man with rounded sloping shoulders in which the bony structure is entirely covered with muscles. His arms are thick and long, and his hands, with fingers extended, reach to his knee caps. His body is squat and short, his chest and back usually square. If a man with this gorilla-like physique can't hit it's a wonder. There's no doubt he could swing an axe.

George Carpenter, who is a close friend of Paolino's and interested in him as a stable mate, gives the Spaniard a boost.

SOUNDS ALRIGHT
"We were boxing in Paris, says Carpenter, 'a friendly bout. Paolino hit me the chin, quite by accident, is it not? See! I am knocked out for fifteen minutes! I knew nothing, I did not wake up. Dempsey did not hit me so hard in all four rounds together. Not all Dempsey's punches were like one of Paolino's! Seriously, I would much stand and let Dempsey hit me twice, so, than have Paolino hit me once!'"

Since Dempsey manages Paolino it's possible Georges was sent on as an assistant to the champion. But Georges Georges admits that he has an ambition to fight two or three heavyweights while here and possibly working his way up to another Dempsey match. Why would he admit that Paolino knocked him out in a training bout. These things happen, but they're seldom talked about.

CYCLONE KELLY MAKES HIS DEBUT
Carpenter reminds me of the days when Kid Carter was the greatest light-heavyweight, although the class was not as strong as it was then. The Kid was fighting big fellows like Gus Rushin and Peter Maher when he could make 155 pounds ring-side at a pinch. This was Carter's favorite story, and when he told it he laughed as if it was the greatest joke in the world.

Carter was training down on the Jersey coast. One day a ragged, half-starved, rough-looking youngster wandered into the hotel where Carter stayed and asked for the Kid. The stranger said, "Black and white, and I want to join your camp and box with him."

"What do you want to see Carter for?" asked the Kid.
"I've been fighting out on the coast," said the grumpy stranger, "and I want to join Carter's camp and box with him."

"Well, I'm Carter," said the Kid, grinning. "Can you fight?"
"I can fight well enough to lick you," said the tramp, pulling off his coat.

"Wait a minute—I'll give you a chance," said Carter hastily. "What's your name?" Cyclone Kelly, eh? Well, you look as if you'd been hit by a cyclone. You need a bath and some clean clothes. Come back to the hotel, and I'll have a bath and fix you up. How did you come to me alone here?"

RODE THE BEAMS
"I heard of you," said Kelly, "and I thought maybe if I could work with you I'd get some fights in the East. I was a little money but I went broke and I rode the rest of the way on the brake beams. I'm ready to go to work right now."

"What did you eat last?" asked Carter.
"Ain't had anything to eat for two or three days," admitted Kelly, "but I'm all right. I'll take you to my box."

"You come out and take a bath and get into some clean clothes," said Carter, "and then I'll get you a big feed and you can turn in for a sleep. You won't work to-day. You work to-morrow."

Next day Cyclone appeared in the gymnasium, clean, white-skinned, but still gaunt and drawn. Carter looked him over and said: "All right, Cyclone. You look better. I'll go easy with you to-day."

"You'll be lucky if I don't knock you stiff," growled Kelly. A little put out by this, Carter started furiously slugging, intending to teach Cyclone better manners. Carter woke up about five minutes later, flat on his back on the floor, with Kelly standing over him. Kelly had knocked him cold with the first punch.

A CYCLONE HITS BLACK BILL
Carter took a great liking to Kelly. They fought in the training quarters, and every now and then they went to the ring with bare fists when they met. Kelly was a real fighter, and so did Kelly. A few weeks later Carter proposed to Kelly that he get Cyclone a fight and act as his manager. Kelly agreed, and Kelly against Black Bill, of Merchantville, a powerful negro, who had been cleaning up in Philadelphia and was fighting Jeanette Langford and a lot of other tough fighters on the coast.

When the fight began Black Bill gave Cyclone a terrific punch, but a couple of minutes and aroused Cyclone to fury. Cyclone rushed Black Bill with a storm of savage blows until Black Bill covered his face with crossed arms and bent over. The wasn't an uncovered spot on Black Bill, except his broad back. Lifting his right arm Kelly brought it down like a club—John L. Sullivan's famous old "back-lung punch"—and hit Black Bill so hard along the spine that Bill fell flat on his face and never again tried to get up. Carter always thought Kelly should have been a champion, but Cyclone grew homesick and migrated westward again, to settle on a ranch in Nevada.

WILLARD COULD HIT WHEN MAD
There have been plenty of hard punches who never won a championship, but the hard-hitting stories you hear are usually about Sullivan or Fitzsimmons, or Jeffries, or Dempsey. New Yorkers remember one punch Jesse Willard cut loose when no one ever dreamed Jess would be a title-holder. It was when Jess was a joke, introduced around the fight clubs to give people a laugh. Soldier Kearns, a tremendous powerful heavyweight, knocked out One Round Davis, of Buffalo, in the first round and was charged for a quick trip to the championship. Kearns' handlers decided to fight against some big fellow every week to give him experience.

A week after the Davis fight Kearns was back in again. Willard, the awkward cowpuncher from Kansas. Of course, everybody expected to see Willard knocked out. Kearns sunk a terrific right hook into the pit of Willard's stomach and stepped back to let him fall. That blow hurt. It made Willard mad. Kearns had started with a couple of paces when Willard suddenly reached over a long right arm and hit the husky soldier on the chin so hard that Kearns' feet flew up and struck the floor on the back of his neck, knocked completely out by one blow. I think it was the hardest right-hand blow I ever saw delivered in a ring. It took a punch to turn the 210-pound sailor upside down in the air before he struck the floor.

A SCIENTIFIC BLOW
Joe Gans struck the most scientific knockout ever recorded. He knocked out Frank Erne for the lightweight championship. Erne had boxed Erne years before, and remembered that Erne had a trick of feinting like lightning with his left to draw a counter blow, instantly pulling his head back just about eight inches to let the counter go by. In the fight Erne used this trick. As they met in the first round, Erne feinted. Instantly Gans swung his body forward as far as he could and drove his right arm straight into the back of Erne's chin. Erne's head bobbed back the expected distance and stopped just in time to get Gans' fist with crushing force on the tip of the chin. A one-punch knockout, delivered with the first blow struck in the fight. And Frank Erne was the cleverest and fastest lightweight champion in the history of the club. He never had the punch of Joe Gans or Benny Leonard, but in flashing speed and ready mind he outclassed them both.

KETCHEL K.O.'S LEWIS
Stanley Ketchel's knockout of Willie Lewis was almost as well planned. Danny McCreck, Lewis' manager, boasted that Lewis would make a fool of Ketchel. Ketchel was a foot and a half taller than Lewis. "I'll knock Lewis out the first time he tries it," Ketchel told the reporters. "You can print that."

In the fight Ketchel dropped his hands to his belt and crowded Lewis, swaying from side to side as he always did. He stopped, wide open in easy range and for an instant stood still. Lewis flashed out his darting left, with the right coming up shoulder high to follow in the same path. But before the right could move Ketchel had swayed just inside the line of Willie's left and shot a short right straight up to Willie's chin. It was so swift that few saw the blow, or could understand why Willie toppled forward and fell on his face, knocked out.

A CUTTING FINISH
Kid McCoy ran into a one-punch knockout one time, and McCoy was the cleverest and trickiest of his time—except Fitzsimmons. McCoy was fighting Jack McCormick, a former amateur wrestler turned fighter, like Paul Hrenchenbach in Chicago. In the first round McCoy sneering, began to pick McCormick apart with cutting blows. McCormick shut his eyes, bent over and let go a tremendous overhand swing. Contemptuous of anything the blow could do, McCoy didn't even see it coming. The referee counted "ten" over the fallen Kid, and it might as well have been fifty. McCoy got McCormick again in a month later and cut him to pieces in eight rounds, delivering a knockout which was a real scientific finish. (Copyright 1926 by The Bell Syndicate.)

SET A WORLD'S RECORD
Passaic, N.J., Feb. 20.—Walter Spence, of the Brooklyn Central Y.M.C.A., set a new world's mark for the 100-meter dash in 15.5 seconds. The 100-meter pool here last night Spence's time of 1:15 3-5 was 1-5 seconds better than the mark made by John Farley of the Illinois A.C. at Chicago March 7, 1924.

Gyros to Honor Master and Crew of Salvage Queen for Hope Rescue

TO PRESENT PLAQUE TO CAPT. HEWISON, OFFICERS AND CREW

Gyro Club to Make Presentation at Chamber of Commerce on Monday

In recognition of saving twenty-eight lives off the tug Hope at Bentinck Island on the evening of October 17, 1925, the Gyro Club of Victoria will present to Capt. J. M. Hewison, the officers and crew of the Pacific Salvage Queen, a brass plaque suitably engraved.

The presentation will be made to Capt. Hewison by Lieutenant-Governor Walter C. Nichol at the weekly luncheon of the Gyro Club to be held on Monday at the Chamber of Commerce at 12:15 o'clock. The affair will be attended by prominent members of the waterfront fraternity.

This presentation comes at a time when the eyes of the world have been focussed on heroic rescues on the Atlantic.

It was only through the quick work and bravery of Capt. Hewison, his officers and men that the twenty-eight seamen from the tug Hope were rescued last October from the swirling waters of racing tide rip. Seven lives were lost and it was a miracle that the other twenty-eight were not drowned in the icy waters.

The disaster occurred after night-fall, which made the rescue work all the more difficult. The tug Hope was forced under a cable stretched from the wrecked Eemdyk, which was ashore on Bentinck Island. When the Hope was hauled up, the cable was found to be a terrific speed past the stern of the Eemdyk. The Hope was caught in the rip, pulled around to the stern of the Eemdyk and was forced under a cable stretched from the Eemdyk to a ledge anchor, causing the tug to turn over and sink. At the time of the disaster the salvage Queen was moored along side the Eemdyk and smart work by Capt. Hewison and the members of his crew resulted in twenty-eight being rescued.

The plaque is engraved as follows: "Presented by the Victoria Gyro Club to the Master, Officers and crew of the Ss. Salvage Queen in recognition of their heroism in saving twenty-eight lives from the tug Hope at Bentinck Island, B.C. on October 17, 1925."

Langford

Special to The Times
Langford, Feb. 20.—A truck laden with lumber, belonging to Harry Catterall, contractor from Victoria, collided with a motor car driven by Mr. Vickery of the Severn-Isle Post, Tuesday when both cars came from opposite directions turned from the Island Highway into Station Road. One wheel of the car was completely broken and the hood torn while Clifford Vickery, the son, had to go to Dr. David suffering from a sound in his head.

Mrs. Albert F. Bayles of Woodstock Farm was the hostess at a delightful party given last night in honor of her husband's birthday. Music, games and four contests were enjoyed and suitable prizes awarded. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Quenne, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brown, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bayles, residents of this place; Simpson, Mrs. J. M. Ritchie, Mrs. C. Bayles, Miss Kathleen Bayles, and Mr. Stanley Turner.

Mr. G. H. Kirk is down from Courtenay to attend the Ford convention in Victoria, and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Brown, Winona Lodge.

Nervousness, Dizzy Spells and Heart Trouble Relieved

Mrs. S. Wideman Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

Ontario Lady Has Had No Return of Her Troubles Since Taking Dodd's Kidney Pills Four Years Ago
Newmarket, Ont., Feb. 17 (Special).—Once again Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value in the case of Mrs. S. Wideman, a well-known resident of this place. She writes: "My back would pain me so at times I could hardly straighten myself when I tried to stoop down. I would get dizzy and my head would tell me to stop. My husband told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used four boxes and can say I have not been troubled since with either of the things I have mentioned and that is over four years ago. I work every day."

That Mrs. Wideman's trouble came from the kidneys is evidenced by the relief she got from Dodd's Kidney Pills. When the kidneys become clogged or out of order, the circulation becomes sluggish, the impurities are not strained out of the blood and the result is weakness and lack of energy all over the body. ## PRAIRIES WISH TO AID MARITIMES

Darke, Regina, Tells Commons People Sympathize With Easterners Problems

Ladner Suggests C.N.R. Take Over Pacific Great Eastern Railway

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—F. N. Darke, Liberal, Regina, speaking in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, said that the people of the prairies were sympathetic with the people of the eastern sections of the country in their efforts to find solutions of their problems. Touching on the objections of one sort and another to proposed legislation to take over the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, he said that the people of the prairies were sympathetic with the people of the eastern sections of the country in their efforts to find solutions of their problems. Others who shared in the debate on the "previous question" motion of the Gyro Club to honor the officers and crew of the Ss. Salvage Queen in recognition of their heroism in saving twenty-eight lives from the tug Hope at Bentinck Island, B.C. on October 17, 1925.

P.O.E. PLAN

Mr. Ladner dealt with the Pacific Great Eastern Railway of British Columbia and the Peace River Block. He said it would be unfortunate if foreign interests obtained control of the Pacific Great Eastern. He suggested that the line over there could be taken to the Canadian National. The 16,000,000 acres voted provincially to the province of British Columbia at the last session of the Legislature of British Columbia.

NATURAL RESOURCES

Speaking of the handling over of its natural resources to the province of Alberta, Mr. Ladner said that the province had been made in the speech from the throne in order to placate Alberta members. Why were not its resources being returned to the province which had returned a large number of Conservative members? he asked.

RETURNED SOLDIERS

Mr. Ladner regretted the administration had proposed no solution for problems affecting returned soldiers. The Government in his opinion, was "weak, inactive and incapable."

RAILROAD TIES

Mr. Kennedy, Conservative, Winnipeg South Centre, read a letter he had received from R. C. Vaughan of the Canadian National Railways explaining the purchase of 45,000 ties for the Hudson Bay Railway in the state of Minnesota. Mr. Vaughan said in the letter as read by Mr. Kennedy, that the ties were required for the Hudson Bay Railway and that there were none in the neighborhood of the line itself. Therefore approximately 45,000 had been obtained from that portion of the old Canadian Northern line, which ran through the state of Minnesota. Probably 50,000 ties in all would be used for the Hudson Bay Railway, he said.

VETERANS' DISABILITIES

Mr. Kennedy made a plea on behalf of veterans who were unable to prove their disabilities were due to war service. The onus should rest upon the Government to prove that

Canada Sails For Far East To-night; Russia Due Monday

With heavy passenger list and cargo, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada, Capt. S. Robinson, will touch at Victoria this evening at 5:30 o'clock, outbound for the Far East. The vessel will clear away shortly after 6 o'clock after picking up passengers and mail at this port. Over 400 passengers have booked passage on the vessel. The liner will take out a cargo amounting to 2,500 tons. The freight includes 500 tons of lead, 300 tons of wood pulp, 1,500 tons of flour, 250 tons of craft paper from B.C. and eastern mills, 105 tons of Alberta coal, in refrigerated cargo space, and a large consignment of general merchandise.

Inbound from the Orient, the C.P.R. steamship Empress of Russia is due at the William Head quarantine station at 8 o'clock on Monday morning. For Victoria the liner has 150 tons of general cargo and about sixty passengers.

disability was not due to war service, he said.

TARIFF QUESTION

Mr. Kennedy said not one political party of any standing in Canada any longer believed in free trade. The Conservatives did not, and the Liberals could not, judging from the utterances of Premier King and such outstanding Liberals as Sir Clifford Sifton.

One of the biggest things the Conservatives had to do to fight "misrepresentations" in connection with the respective positions of the parties on the tariff, he said. The policy of the Conservatives was to give to industries in Canada such measure of protection as would enable them to continue their business enterprises, pay the workers the standard of wages demanded in Canada and get a reasonable profit, he stated.

PACIFIC TRADER TO LOAD APPLES

Furness Pacific Vessel to Take on 60,000 Boxes at Seattle

Seattle, Feb. 20.—In the Pacific Coast North American service of the Furness Pacific line the British mail steamer Pacific Trader is due here Monday. She is to load 60,000 boxes of Washington apples and some canned salmon here and is then to proceed to Seattle for a shipment of copper ingots.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS LAUNCH SWASTIKA

C. W. Henneman, Reported as Owning Wrecked Vessel, Tells Interesting Story

Seattle, Feb. 20.—Mystery surrounds the identity of the launch Swastika, which was wrecked on the reefs at the east end of Entrance Island, Quatsino Sound, early Thursday morning. C. W. Henneman, 19, E. 9th Street, was reported to be the owner of the vessel, said he abandoned a launch by the name of Swastika in 1919 after the loss had wrecked the tide-flats near the 11th Street Bridge in Tacoma.

SMUTS OPPOSES Scheme to Enlarge League Council

London, Feb. 20.—The proposal for a general enlargement of the Council of the League of Nations at present will be understood as a device to pack the Council and deal a smashing blow to the League and the work done at Locarno, states General Jan Christiaan Smuts, former Premier of South Africa, and leader of the South African Party, in a message to The London Daily News from Capetown.

FORD WINS THIRD TITLE

Miami, Fla., Feb. 19.—Ford York won his third golf championship of the season here yesterday when he defeated James W. West, Miami Southpaw, 8 and 6 for the annual Miami Amateur championship tournament. Ford previously won the Miami mid-winter and the Miami Beach championships.

TRIAL OF SCHOONER PESCAWHA PROCEEDS IN PORTLAND COURT

Dramatic Story Told of Capture of Canadian Schooner Last February

Portland, Ore., Feb. 20.—Although more than a year had elapsed since the sensational capture of the Canadian gasoline schooner Pescawha by the coast-guard cutter Algonquin the story as related in the court of Federal Judge Bean here yesterday was just as dramatic as it was in February of 1925. The Pescawha with more than 1,000 cases of bonded liquor aboard was captured in the Gray's Harbor after Capt. Robert Pamphlet and his crew had picked up nine survivors of the wrecked lumber schooner Cuckoo. The Algonquin, which the Pescawha while searching for the missing members of the Cuckoo crew.

Lieutenant-Commander William P. Wislawa, recently captain of the schooner, told the story of the capture of the alleged run runner, and the arrest of the members of his crew. He began by telling of the loss of the Cuckoo on February 1, 1925, in the Puget Sound, when the schooner was wrecked in an effort to pick up survivors.

Attorneys for the defence, who have been divided into two groups, the land and sea forces, objected to the alleged run runner, and the arrest of the members of his crew. He began by telling of the loss of the Cuckoo on February 1, 1925, in the Puget Sound, when the schooner was wrecked in an effort to pick up survivors.

The log of the Algonquin, which featured in the recent court martial, was introduced as evidence to the land and sea forces, and the alleged run runner, and the arrest of the members of his crew. He began by telling of the loss of the Cuckoo on February 1, 1925, in the Puget Sound, when the schooner was wrecked in an effort to pick up survivors.

In the direct examination of both Commander Wislawa and Lieut. Smith the Government avoided direct reference to the log, asking the witnesses to recollect the facts. The log of the Algonquin, which featured in the recent court martial, was introduced as evidence to the land and sea forces, and the alleged run runner, and the arrest of the members of his crew. He began by telling of the loss of the Cuckoo on February 1, 1925, in the Puget Sound, when the schooner was wrecked in an effort to pick up survivors.

Two vessels are due at Ogden Point to-morrow to load lumber. At noon the British steamship Pennyworth is expected from Norfolk, Va., to take on 200,000 feet for the Atlantic seaboard.

TWO VESSELS DUE TO LOAD LUMBER

Pennyworth and Brookdale Both Expected at Ogden Point To-morrow

FOUR SHIPS SAIL TO-DAY FOR ALASKA

Vessels With Cannery Supplies Begin Movement of Freight to Salmon Plants

Seattle, Feb. 20.—Four units of the fleet of the Alaska Steamship Company, the steamship Alameda, Corvo, Latouche and Redondo, are scheduled to sail from Seattle to-day, bound for Alaska. Three of the ships will be loaded with cannery supplies, their departure marking the first big movement of freight from Seattle this year to the northern salmon plants.

NEW "70" SIX IS FEATURE MODEL OF WILLYS-KNIGHT

In the Willys-Knight exhibit at the New York Automobile Show, interest centres in the new "70" Willys-Knight Six, shown in a five passenger sedan model which will be standard production in this line for 1926, although a few touring cars are promised from export department.

The motor in this new Willys-Knight product has a 2 1/2 inch bore and 4 1/2 inch stroke, cylinders cast in bloc, with the typical Willys-Knight aluminum head construction. Cooling is thermostatically controlled. New departures are seen in the construction of the intake manifold. The motor is equipped with an air-strainer over the carburetor, a sweep-bearing crankshaft is used and a unique control of lubrication through the throttle is also displayed. Body construction gives a low appearance, consistent with the latest European body developments. Seats are deep, with high, lazy backs.

Tests made of the power plant in this new Willys-Knight product show a higher torque per cubic inch of displacement than has ever before been obtained in an American built motor, and which has been equaled by but one European power plant, also a Knight type motor.

The Willys-Knight Great Six is shown without noticeable change at the end of the first year in which it has been in production. Motor construction shows, in addition to the air-strainer, an oil rectifier which cleanses the lubricating oil, with every 100 miles of travel of the car. Standard production in the Great Six includes the sedan in five and seven passenger models, four passenger coupe, five passenger touring and two passenger roadster.

The Overland Six display include a standard sedan of two-door construction and a cutaway motor. This sedan model is finished in a high quality polished lacquer. A noticeable feature of the body construction is the width of the doors, which are so built that occupants of the rear seat may get in or out without disturbing the occupants of the front seat.

The front-seat cushion is undivided, the backs being split at the centre and swinging forward. Large windows are noticeable in the body design. Standard production also includes a four-door de luxe sedan in this model.

The standard sedan body type, with body dimensions of exceptional size for a car in this price class. The door construction in this car follows that of the Overland Six, to allow the same convenience in getting in or out of the rear compartment.

TO STOP PLUCKING ROADSIDE BLOSSOMS

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 20.—No more will automobiles return to cities and towns laden with freshly plucked blossoms from the forests and fields of this state.

The rhododendron bill, designed to protect the state flower as well as other ornamental trees, shrubs and plants, which passed both Houses, makes it a misdemeanor to cut any such vegetation without the consent of the owner. Cars bearing flowers may be legally stopped by highway traffic officials that passengers may be questioned regarding wild flower desecration.

EXPERTS ACT TO BAN AUTO 'SHIMMY'

Since the general adoption of balloon tires as original equipment, successful effort has been put forth to eliminate a front wheel "shimmy" which sometimes was experienced, according to tire manufacturers here.

"Shimmy" is a phenomenon of the vibration of the automobile and road shocks, timed with the revolution of the wheels, according to tire experts. When these came at regular intervals the vibration or shaking of the wheels known as "shimmying" resulted.

Asphalt paving with low, wavy irregularities, for instance, is conducive to "shimmying." However, no matter what type of paving is encountered, wheels will not "shimmy" until the car is in the proper speed range, it is declared.

Despite the popular opinion, "shimmy" is not a condition experienced only with balloon tires, as machines on high-pressure tires as well may show the same result.

In the high-speed "shimmy" the front wheels appear to oscillate from one side to the other, instead of rolling forward along a straight path. In addition to these slight oscillations, there is also an up and down movement, all of which, when stopped by a reduction of the speed of the car.

Tread design also has an effect on the susceptibility and intensity of the "shimmy," according to tire engineers. The combination ribbed design being among the best in eliminating it. Through the development of a gear shaped, flat tread, with ribs around the circumference of the tire in the centre of the tread, a great deal has been done in eliminating the "shimmy."

The low-speed "shimmy," engineers declare, usually is due to slack, looseness, or wear in the steering mechanism, and is the form with which most people are familiar.

CADILLAC HAS SHOWN REMARKABLE GROWTH

The recent remarkable growth of the Cadillac Motor Car Company has been a matter of note to the motor buying public and members of the automobile industry. Many new developments have occurred during the past few months, including a new vigor in sales policies and the bringing out of a new car, which, while retaining all of the qualities which have made Cadillac a leader in the fine car field, has struck an entirely new note in appearance and performance.

Less than a year ago, in the appointment of Lawrence P. Fisher to the presidency, Cadillac experienced the advent of a new executive leadership. The new president has been closely associated with the automobile business for many years as vice-president of the Fisher Body Corporation. He had been an important factor in the organization and management of the great Fisher Industries, later becoming vice-president of the General Motors Corporation, and a member of its executive committee. Through both of these relations, he had been in close contact with all of Cadillac's problems and had contributed greatly to Cadillac's progress.

The new president's reputation for quality manufacturing was ample guarantee that under his management Cadillac traditions would be maintained. The Fisher reputation for doing things guaranteed even more.

A few months after Lawrence Fisher's arrival at Cadillac, the company had invested two and one-half million dollars in new equipment for the purpose of producing a new car.

Under the leadership of the young executive from the Fisher company, the Cadillac organization had maneuvered itself into a new position of strength and leadership in the quality field. It had made a transition calling for the ablest of business generalship, a difficult change for a long established company to negotiate.

One of the great reasons for Lawrence Fisher's success as chief of the Cadillac organization is his broad and fundamental knowledge of the automobile industry. He is a recent off-hand remark of his, in speaking of his business associates, and it has been his constant conviction that there is a very wide class of those same "plain folks" who would and could buy Cadillac cars.

With confidence in this greatly enlarged market, the price of the new car is substantially lowered and the traditional Cadillac quality and rigidly maintained. In the first five months of its production, approximately 14,000 were sold. This was only 3,000 less than the entire production for the previous twelve months. Unfilled orders also ran unusually high.

CHEVROLET LANDAU SEDAN INTRODUCED

A smart addition to the closed line of the Chevrolet Motor Company is the new Landau Sedan, a five-passenger model of distinctive lines and coloring.

The Landau assures its owners of an attractive exclusiveness closely approaching that of the expensive custom-built special bodies. Like all other closed Chevrolets, the body is by Fisher.

Hood and exterior body panels are finished in Duco of the new Arizona grey color, set off by gold striping. The effect of the Landau windows is enhanced by the rounded lines and the sweeping handrails of the leather-covered rear quarter. The of Cadillac's problems and had contributed greatly to Cadillac's progress.

The interior coloring harmonizes with the grey of the outside. The car is completely appointed, having dash and dome lights, rolled shade, foot rest, door pockets and interior hardware by Tenstedt.

To Keep Valve Clear

To remove pits from the face of a valve before grinding it, use either a valve facing grinder or put the valve in a lathe. Be careful to clean all carbon from the valve stem, as a slight particle on the stem will throw it off centre in the lathe. Face the valve with a lathe tool or a tool post grinder.

Motor Toll Bridge

Tolls aggregating $500,000 were collected from 861,000 motor vehicles while crossing Gandy Bridge, which connects Tampa and St. Petersburg, Fla., during its first year of operation. The bridge is five and a quarter miles long and is claimed to be the longest motor toll bridge and longest over-water highway in the world.

Causes of Brake Screech

Screeching brakes are evidence of dirty brakes, provided the brake lining still is in good condition. If the brake lining is worn it often happens that an exposed rivet will scrape against the brake drum.

It is well to remember that it is not always possible to determine the condition of brake linings by looking at their edges. Wear takes place more in the centre, and if the bands are not concentric with the drums wear may be very irregular.

Peril in Wet Windshield

A wet windshield is dangerous, especially at night when light from approaching cars is magnified by rain drops blinding the driver. If your car is not equipped with an automatic windshield wiper apply a solution to the glass to clear the vision. One that has proved satisfactory contains a mixture of two ounces of glycerin and one ounce of water and one dram of salt. Apply with a soft cloth, rubbing up and down.

New Records and New Prices!

Graham Brothers Truck sales for 1925 were the largest in their history.

The previous record breaking year was surpassed by 123 per cent.

Such healthy increases in demand require proportionate increases in production.

Graham Brothers four factories are now equipped for larger output than ever before.

They are therefore able to give truck buyers the benefit of still further savings—

Savings that are now passed along in the form of another substantial price reduction—the fourth such reduction in eight months!

Pointers on the Ignition System

There are certain parts of an automobile that should not be "tinkered" with and among these are the carburetor and ignition. As long as the engine is running regularly with plenty of pep it is a good idea to keep your hands off these parts and not try to improve things by trying out new adjustments. However after an engine has run several thousand miles the contact points become burned away to such an extent that it is necessary to dress them squarely and readjust the gap.

The ignition system consists of four principal parts—the battery, coil, contact breaker and distributor, and the spark plugs. When you turn on the switch the current from the battery flows from the battery to the coil which transforms the low voltage battery current to a high voltage. From the coil the current passes to the contact breaker and distributor. The purpose of the contact breaker is to cause a spark to occur at the spark plug points at the exact moment required while the distributor leads the spark to the plug in the cylinder which is on the point of firing.

The first necessity for a good spark at the plug-points is a fully charged battery. If your lights burn brightly and the starter turns over smartly you can be quite sure the battery is OK.

The coil is not adjustable and requires no attention whatever other than to see that it is kept free from grease and dirt.

The contact breaker and distributor are in one unit. The distributor is the small round bakelite case covering the contact breaker and has the wires coming out of it that lead to the spark plugs. It can be removed and examined by unscrewing the clips at the side and lifting off with the wire attached. Sometimes the distributor contacts are flat brass segments and on other types of distributors they are small pins projecting down. In any case all that is necessary is to brighten them up with a piece of fine sand paper then smear a little vaseline around inside the head.

The contact breaker points must come together squarely and open just the correct distance if you are to get a good hot spark at the points of the spark plugs. Generally it is not necessary to touch the points often than about once every 5,000 miles but this depends largely on the quality of the metal used in them. If you have poor points or imitation points they may burn away quite rapidly. Always insist on having the genuine points supplied by the manufacturer of the ignition when it is necessary to fit new points.

If you find it is necessary to adjust them often than once every 5,000 miles it is possible that the condenser—used to prevent arcing across the contact points—is defective and a good ignition man can quickly test it and tell you if it is OK or not.

If the points are badly pitted insert a piece of very fine emery cloth between them, then press together and pull out or pull to and fro between the points. It is much better for the average driver to have a good ignition man dress up the points and adjust the gaps. If the points do not come together squarely or if the gap is not adjusted correctly you will not get a good hot spark at the plug points.

Release for week ending February 21st.

the "70" WILLYS-KNIGHT

Sedan $2595 Delivered
Victoria

Crystallizes the higher efficiency for which engineers have been striving during 10 years' ceaseless survey and experiment in Europe and America.

Combining the world renowned advantages of the Knight Sleeve-valve motor (smoothness, long life, simplicity, economy) with revolutionary achievements in Six Cylinder engineering, has resulted in this new "70."

In speed, power and pickup the "70" outperforms any other car of its size and type and class. It has the only type of engine that actually improves with use. No carbon to remove. No valves to grind. Better and smoother at 50,000 miles than at the beginning.

You'll find a zest in driving the new Willys-Knight "70" you have missed in other motor cars. Instantaneously responsive to the throttle, it licks up the road and eats up the miles with a great appetite for distance. Flashing pick-up whisks you around other cars on the road or zips you out in front of traffic. And its silky smoothness is a joy to feel. Drive it at 2 to 65 miles or faster; the engine quietly purrs on; not a semblance of vibration.

At all speeds there is a complete absence of all road shocks. As a result of its advanced engineering there is absolutely no wandering, no shimmying, no wheel-fight. The interior while compact to the last degree is positively alone in its extra roominess and comfort.

Such items as four-wheel brakes, air purifier, gasoline filter, thermostat and heater are, of course, included as standard equipment. A special feature provides instant starting in zero temperatures.

The New "70" Willys-Knight Six, the "66" Willys-Knight Six and the Overland Six and Four Cylinder Models are the greatest cars and the greatest values Willys-Overland has ever produced. See them.

Buy with Care!

Three Things Determine Whether the Price You Pay for Your Automobile is High or Low—

Check Value for Value

Check the value in the car you buy on the basis of the advertised f.o.b. price. Chevrolet quality, power, appearance, easy riding, dependability and economy provide the reasons why over 2,000,000 people have bought Chevrolet cars.

Investigate the Cash Delivered Price

The purchaser of any automobile pays for freight, tax and handling charges. Chevrolet's low delivered price includes these charges—there is no padding.

Check Time Financing Charges

The financing charges when buying a Chevrolet on time are the lowest in the world. And these minimum charges include financing and fire and theft insurance. No other charges—no side notes to be signed.

Because of Chevrolet's low cash delivered price and the lowest of financing charges, you obtain the greatest value at the lowest cost, whether you pay cash or buy your CHEVROLET on the GMAC Time Payment Plan.

Come in—Let us show you how we can save you money in buying a Chevrolet on time.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

NEW WILLYS-KNIGHT DODGE SALES SET "70" IN VICTORIA AND OTHER RECORD

In appearance and performance the new Willys-Knight "70" has exceeded the expectations of the local distributor, according to a statement made this morning by Thos. Plimley and Sons, agents for Victoria.

Several of the new cars have arrived in Victoria and they have been given severe tests by the local demonstrators. The car will easily climb any hills around Victoria in high, while the new model makes a mile a minute with ease. The "70" does twenty-five miles on a gallon of gasoline.

The new Knight is run by the internationally famous Knight sleeve valve motor. It has a 113 1/2 inch wheel base, which makes for easy handling and parking. Light and signal controls are at your finger tips without removing hands from the steering wheel.

The car is a reproduction of the greater Knight which was brought out by the Willys-Overland Corporation last year and holds the greatest performance records of any automobile in America.

Already three of the new models have been sold in Victoria and another shipment is expected here about the first of March.

Air Leak Registers Empty

If a gasoline gauge operating on the hydrostatic principle is leaking the pointer on the wash will fall back to "empty" even when there is gasoline in the tank. Hydrostatic gauges work on the principle of air pressure as regulated by the pressure of the gasoline in the tank. An air leak, therefore, causes the indicator to register "empty" even though the tank may be full.

Spring For Choker

A spring attached to the choker valve at the carburetor is the remedy for forgetting to push in the choker after the engine has started. Only when cranking the engine by hand is it necessary to have the choke remain out of its own accord, and then it would be a simple matter to remove the spring temporarily. Most of the new engines require but a few seconds' of choking.

True Up Front Wheels

Many car owners fail to make headway when lining up the front wheels because they fail to true up the wheels and tires separately. The front wheels may toe to the proper amount, but the rims may not run true, thus throwing the steering out of line. This can be determined by revolving the wheels separately and noting how true they turn. Any variation may be due to the wheels being too loose on the axles or to the rims being screwed to the wheels unevenly.

The month recently closed was the biggest January in the history of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and Graham Brothers, according to official figures received here by A. E. Humphries, Dodge Brothers distributor. Actual retail deliveries of 14,943 cars and trucks was the record reached in the four weeks ending January 30. This was an increase over the same period of January, 1925, the greatest previous January for Dodge Brothers, of 13,011 cars, a gain of 67.4 per cent. The gain over January, 1923, the banner year prior to 1925 for the automotive industry, was even greater.

New orders for the month reached an even higher figure—19,213 units. The biggest January week in Dodge Brothers' history was that ending January 7, at the same time that marked improvements were made in all types. The figures announced by Dodge Brothers, Inc., represent actual deliveries to car owners for immediate use, not factory shipments of cars for storage to supply anticipated Spring demand.

Although Dodge Brothers, Inc., and Graham Brothers' production is rising daily, Mr. Humphries stated, commenting on the January record, "these delivery records, made in January, usually are of short duration, clearly that public recognition of the exceptional values represented by the recent improvements and the new low prices will soon cause a continued wiping out of the small Winter stocks which dealers have been able to accumulate in anticipation of the heavy demand usually experienced by manufacturers in the early Spring."

NEW STAR CAR IS POPULAR MODEL

Deliveries of the new Star car for the month of January showed an increase of forty-five per cent over the deliveries of January, 1925, according to an announcement issued from the factory at Leaside, Toronto, by C. W. Lovell, of the Atkinson Motor Company.

The new Star model, which is built in four and six-cylinder versions, has many features that make it a popular model. It is four inches wider and six inches longer than the ordinary Star model, built of heavy material. They have better seating accommodation and are an improvement in every way. The car has a ducor finished body.

Three shipments of the new models have arrived within the last two weeks and another carload is expected here on Thursday and are practically all sold. The new four models come in coupe, touring, sedan and station wagon styles, while the six-cylinder models include the coupe, sedan and landau sedan.

There is a great deal more power in the new models and a better lubrication system. The radiator is nickel plated, while the wheels are of the artillery type with much larger spokes. The tires are of the latest balloon type. The big six-cylinder is the feature model with the latest in accessories.

ONE-PROFIT SYSTEM GIVES REFINEMENTS

If there really is anything to Studebaker's one-profit system, it should be through one-profit manufacture, there ought to be quality of material and craftsmanship; there ought to be luxury in fittings and equipment and there ought to be no loss of profit on others of like price not so built.

Comparisons of cars ought to show it plainly. There is no need for anything to be left out of the work of an interested party, like the car's maker. Of course, if that "more for the money" actually is there, it is of interest to the mind of everyone interested in the purchase of a car.

Prospective buyers of cars might do well to look around and see a Studebaker car, just as a matter of information, see how many of the items are found on other cars of similar price.

Genuine mohair upholstery, costing from $68 to $97 more than cotton, Brussels rugs, instead of compressed wadding. Foot rest, wide, and covered with carpet, fastened by aluminum fittings, instead of from pipe held by light steel stampings. Robe rail covered with upholstery, instead of a bare iron rod.

White ash at $107 a thousand feet for slits, rail and door pillars, instead of cheap wood at $60 a thousand feet. Genuine long-curlled hair with no more in it, as with the cheaper cushions. Heavier hardware and hinges.

Then it is worthy of note that the big six is known to the industry as the fastest selling high-powered car in the world, having no competitor with equal rated horse power within 100 per cent of its price. The standard six is known as the highest priced car in the world, and as the car with the fastest get-away in traffic.

These achievements are all due to the fact that Studebaker has put more into a car, so that the owner may get more out of it.

If one end of the pillars is ground down it becomes a very handy screwdriver. While it can be used for this purpose, just as the tool is, sometimes it is more convenient to remove the nut that holds the two sides together and use the screwdriver side alone.

SHORT WAVE BROADCAST OFFERS WIDER SCOPE

For broadcast listeners of an experimental turn of mind, the reception of short wave broadcast and amateur stations offers a wide field for experiment. By short waves we generally mean wave lengths of a few metres—up to around 150 metres, most of the regular broadcasting being done between 200 and 550 metres.

Best results are obtained with a short vertical or horizontal aerial, well insulated, between thirty-five and seventy feet long. A series fixed condenser of about 0.01 microfarad capacity, or an eleven-plate variable condenser is usually used in the ground lead of the receiving outfit; the primary coil being from two to ten turns of wire, not less than 10 DCC in size. A seven to eleven-plate variable condenser of the low loss type is sufficient to tune the secondary circuit, which should cover the various wave bands. The reinsert, or the standard three-coil circuit give very good results for short wave reception.

Among the low wave broadcast and code stations are:

KHQ, Spokane, Wash.; KDKA, East Pittsburgh, Pa.; WGB, Springfield, Mass.; WGY, Schenectady, N.Y.; WIK, New Brunswick, N.J.; 22 metres (code); WIZ, New Brunswick, 43.02 metres (code); KRL, Hollins, Cal., 95 metres (code).

These stations have all been received in Victoria by several experimenters using one and two-tube receiving outfits in broad daylight. The tuning is very critical and vernier dials are a great help in catching the carrier waves. In addition to the broadcast stations mentioned, there are many short wave code stations and amateur transmitters.

Some of these as far away as the Atlantic Coast can be easily tuned in with a one-tube receiver. Patient experiment by both scientists and amateurs has shown that the shorter wave lengths come in better in daylight than at night.

How to Construct Browning-Drake Coils

In the construction of Browning-Drake receivers the following coil data should be useful: The input, or antenna coil, consists of fifty turns of No. 20 D.S.C. wire wound on a piece of three-inch rubber tubing bakelite tubing. This coil is usually tapped in the centre so that its use will either a long or short antenna can be flexibly arranged. Of course, this means the centre tap would be used with a long antenna, while the short antenna would be brought in at the high potential side of the coil.

The regenerative is constructed as follows:

Seventy-seven turns of No. 20 D.S.C. wire should be wound on another piece of three-inch rubber tubing, which should be about five inches long in order to allow for the mounting of the tickler. This winding is the secondary of the Browning-Drake tuned radio frequency transformer and is tapped at the fourteenth turn for the purpose of neutralization.

The tickler consists of thirty turns of wire, which may be about No. 28 or 30 D.S.C. wound on a piece of two-inch tubing which is mounted on a rod. This rod may be fastened by end pieces to the variable condenser so as to bring it in proper relation to the coil in order to cause regeneration. Roughly, this tickler coil is about under the last turn of wire.

We now come to the primary, which is the really important and principal part of this receiver. A small wooden disc about 3/4 or 1/2 inch thick should be obtained with a diameter which will just permit it to slide snugly inside of the three-inch tubing upon which the secondary is wound. On the outer rim, or tread, of this wooden disc a slot should be cut 1/4 inch wide and 1/4 inch deep. Now twenty-four turns of No. 30 D.S.C. wire should be wound in the slot in the so-called "jumble" fashion, the arrangement of the turns not being at all critical. When the turns have been brought out and securely fastened in place, the primary is a complete unit. This should be slipped inside the secondary in place so that the slot comes under the first turn. It will be seen at this point that the fit of this wooden disc must be quite snug in order to keep it in place inside the secondary tubing.

In order to maintain the proper relation between inductance and capacitance over a band of frequencies, it is necessary to vary both simultaneously. A flat spiral coil is wound of spring metal, preferably of a copper composition, and of sufficient width to give fairly high distributed capacitance between turns. The non-technical builder will have to use the trial-and-error method in choosing the right width and spacing for best results. Those who are mathematically inclined can calculate these factors to suit conditions.

To prevent mechanical vibration, the turns may be immersed in heavy transformer oil. The outer turn of the variable spiral is made fast to a terminal at the top, while the inside turn is secured to a rotating shaft. The shaft of the dial attached to the shaft causes its spiral to wind or unwind, depending upon its rotation, clockwise or counter-clockwise direction of rotation. This varies the distance between the turns, which is the cause of simultaneous change in inductance and capacitance.

This method of tuning will be found very effective for short wave lengths, on which exceedingly fine adjustment is necessary.

Now, my dear, since I've fully explained the radio set to you, are there any questions?

She: "Yes, I am curious to know how often they read the wavemeter."

SAVE THE FILAMENTS

It will probably be an old story to hear what dire results may come from trying to use the VT's in the radio receiver to light up the room or to illuminate the interior of the cabinet. The modern tubes are made to operate properly with but little illumination coming from the filaments. In fact, these tubes are known as "dull emitters."

Nothing is gained by burning the filaments brightly; on the contrary, much may be lost. Remember that when the voltage on the filament of a tube is even as little as ten per cent above the voltage it was designed for, the life of the tube may be cut in half.

SPRING MOTOR CAR OPENING WILLYS-KNIGHT and OVERLAND

You and Your Friends are Invited to attend--

The Spring motor car Opening at our Showrooms, beginning Saturday and continuing throughout the following week.

Overland and Willys-Knight cars—four and six-cylinder, for 1926, will be on display. You will be interested in seeing the New "70" Willys-Knight Six, the car that has attracted such great attention at all recent national shows.

During Motor Show Week 102,909 persons crowded the Broadway Showrooms of Willys-Overland, New York City, to see the New "70" Willys-Knight Six.

During Montreal Motor Show Week thousands saw the super-performance of the "70" thrillingly demonstrated on the snow-blocked slopes of Mount Royal.

Come in Saturday afternoon or evening if you can. Come in any time next week at your convenience. You will see the greatest cars and the greatest values Willys-Overland has ever produced.

"WHEN EAST MEETS WEST" IS SUBJECT

Rev. A. K. McMinn, B.A., Will Preach From Metropolitan Pulpit

Rev. A. K. McMinn, B.A., will occupy the pulpit of Metropolitan Church on Sunday morning, and will speak on the subject, "When East Meets West." Mr. McMinn will endeavor to show the results of the mystical and contemplative attitude of the Eastern mind in its contact with the practical attitude of Western thought. Christianity to an Eastern religion and the mystic mind of the East has a contribution to give to the Western world, in order to a better interpretation of the meaning of Christ and Christianity for the world and its problems.

Dr. Sipprell will speak in the evening upon the subject, "Abraham—The Man of Faith." Dr. Sipprell has been requested to deliver a series of addresses on "Great Men of the Bible," while no decision has yet been reached in the matter, he will speak on the life and faith of Abraham and show the character, the trial and the triumph of the faith of a man, who believed God and attained righteousness before God, in an age when civilization was but little advanced compared with today.

Pastor Thinks Religion Should Be Treated in Businesslike Way

Centennial Church has been the scene of much activity during this week. On Monday evening Dean Quainton delighted a large audience with his lecture on "England and the English." On Tuesday the brotherhood of Centennial was strengthened by a public and congregational reception in being held for her by members of the church at the parish house to-night.

Woman Minister To Preach Sunday

Victoria's first woman pastor, the Rev. Ada Tonkin, will preach her second sermon here at the First United Church, Fernwood and Balmoral Roads, Sunday at 11 a.m. The subject of her sermon is announced as "The Past and the Future."

SALVATION ARMY

Major Hector Habkirk of Winnipeg, trade secretary for Western Canada, will be welcomed at the Salvation Army Citadel to-night. He is a veteran officer of the Canadian field and well known in the West, having been stationed at Vancouver. After the meeting he will interview those requiring anything from the Trade headquarters.

EMMANUEL BAPTIST CHURCH

The pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, the Rev. Henry Knox, will commence to-morrow evening a series of sermons on "The Seven Sayings From the Cross." This first sermon of the series will be on "Forgiveness," based upon the prayer of Jesus, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." The message will be of a very practical character, for the Gospel is a message for our everyday life. The large choir, noted for its fine interpretation of the best anthems and for its lead in the service of praise, will sing the anthem, "The Lord Is Loving" (Garrett), and E. E. Rowley, who possesses a rich bass voice, will also sing.

All members of St. John's Anglican Young People's Association and the Beacon Girls' Club and the Corinthian Boys' Club will attend Holy Communion at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning at St. John's Church.

TO GIVE MESSAGE FROM BURBANK

"Is Luther Burbank an Infidel?" Sunday Subject by Dr. Clem Davies

Announcement is made that a special message, personally prepared by Luther Burbank, the world's greatest horticulturalist and plant-wizard, will be given to the morning congregation of the Victoria, City Temple on Sunday.

The music at the City Temple will comprise, anthem, "Like as the Hart" (Novello), in the morning, and their obligato with Frank Partidge taking the refrain in "Seek Ye the Lord" (Dr. Roberts).

The musical prelude by the Temple orchestra, who play by permission of the Musicians' Union, will be rendered by 7 to 7:30 p.m.

"DANTE'S INFERNO" PASTOR'S SUBJECT

Second of Series of Addresses at James Bay Church

The new and unique series of addresses which are being delivered at the James Bay Church each Sunday evening by the Rev. E. Leslie Best on Dante's "Inferno," began last Sunday and will be continued on Sunday night. Last week the first canto, describing the path to the Inferno, was discussed, and a large congregation was drawn to listen to the opening of the series. Next Sunday night, under the title "Not Worth Damning," the James Bay pastor will deal with the idea brought forward by Dante, and found nowhere else in literature, that there are people so selfish and useless to the world and society that they can find no place either in heaven or hell and are dumped at the gates of hell as the garbage of the Universe. Mr. Best will try to discover whether there is any ground for such a suggestion, and will also try to discover if any of such a race may be found in the present day.

In the morning the pastor will deal with another of the "Pelle" of human living, taking as his subject, "The Peril of Victory."

Presbytery to Meet in City on Tuesday Next

The Presbytery of Victoria which meets in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday evening next has considerable business for consideration. Among other matters to be discussed will be reports from the various congregations within the Presbytery. Thomas Humphries, the clerk, states that the Presbytery, which has been left to join the United Church, there are still nine preaching points with a membership of 1,200, and a large number of adherents.

A call from the congregation at Kerrisdale has been extended to the Rev. David Lister of Nanaimo, who will come before the Presbytery at its meeting here. A strong delegation from the northern city to oppose the transfer of Mr. Lister is expected. The congregation which now numbers 228 has been compelled to leave their church, and is at present worshipping in a hall. It is stated the government commission has not yet reached a decision in regard to the final disposition of the church property in Nanaimo. Presbyterians feel very keenly their being turned out on the street, while the United Church will own three church buildings. It is understood that Presbyterians will take a strong stand in support of the Nanaimo congregation. Commissioners to the General Assembly, which meets in Montreal in June next, are to be appointed.

On Wednesday evening there will be a public meeting in St. Andrew's Church at 8 p.m. The Rev. R. J. Douglas, synodical missionary, and others will speak.

Lenten Services.—Rev. T. W. Gladstone will hold Lenten services every Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, during Lent, in the Sunday School of the Reformed Episcopal Church. Services will be held at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. each Wednesday during Lent.

BAPTIST CHURCH TO CHOOSE NEW PASTOR

Question of Permanent Incumbent to be Considered; Church Progresses

At the morning service in First Baptist Church last Sunday a number of honor certificates were presented to members of the Sunday School for faithful attendance.

The Superintendent of the school, Dr. William Russell, spoke in commendatory terms on the splendid progress of the work in the school, encouraging the workers and thanking the church for the increased interest manifested since moving to the present building.

He then called up forty-two members of the school, of which number twenty-nine had qualified for the one-year certificate, three for three years, four for four years, three for five years and one each for six and seven years. Special attention was called to a record of Miss Eunice Rodger, who had attained a perfect record of attendance for seventeen years.

Each week the choir is showing new evidence of enthusiasm in the church and its work. The newly-organized choir is acquitting itself splendidly under the leadership of F. J. Mitchell, with Oliver Stout presiding at the organ.

On Tuesday afternoon last a most successful social tea was conducted by the Women's Union, when the officers and group leaders were hostesses for the occasion. Mrs. H. F. Bishop, the president, occupying the chair.

Next Wednesday evening the members of the church are uniting with the Emmanuel Church for the prayer meeting, after which the ordinance of believer's baptism will be administered by the acting pastor, Rev. Dr. C. Wellington Camp.

Dean Quainton To Give Special Lenten Series

Will Preach at Cathedral on "The Problem of Atonement"

There will be a special series of Lenten sermons at the Cathedral by the Very Rev. C. S. Quainton, beginning February 21, at 11 a.m. The subject this Sunday morning will be "The Problem of the Atonement." This is a real difficulty to many thoughtful people. The Dean will discuss the relation between the Atonement and Modern Thought.

At 7:30 p.m. the subject will be "How to Read the Bible." Many sincere people want to read the Bible, but find it difficult, and in places meaningless. The Dean will outline a plan of obtaining the best results from the Bible.

The Dean finds he is obliged to cancel the lecture on "Erasmus" announced for February 25. He hopes to deliver it at a later date.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH PLANS LENTEN SERIES

Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick Arranges Special Lenten Features

The season of Lent will be observed at St. John's Church with special services, and two courses of sermons will be delivered at the Sunday services. The rector, Rev. F. A. P. Chadwick, is to preach at the Sunday morning services during Lent, and at the evening services on Wednesday and Friday.

The Anglican Young People's Association, the Beacon Girls' Club and the Corinthian Boys' Club will attend the 8 o'clock service for corporate communion and the young people of the church will be invited to be present. The confirmation class will meet in the church at 2:30.

"PLAY THE GAME" IS SERMON THEME

Pastor, Rev. R. W. Lee, Conducts Both Services at Fairfield

Both services in the Fairfield United Church on Sunday next will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. W. Lee.

Sunday is to be "Maintenance and Extension Day" at Fairfield, when offerings for the United Church of Canada will be taken. Service in harmony with the occasion have been arranged, and the officials are looking forward to a successful day.

The pastor will take as his morning topic, "The Church in Action," while at night Mr. Lee will speak on "Play the Game." The congregations continue to grow and interest is also growing. The public will find Fairfield a lively church, and a place, "Where Religion Inspires."

A lantern lecture on "Missionary Work Among the Indians of Northern British Columbia" will be given by Ven. Archdeacon Laycock in St. Alban's Church Hall, corner of Ryan and Belmont, on Friday, February 26, at 8 p.m. A collection will be taken in aid of the funds of the Junior W.A.U. under whose auspices the lecture is being given.

DEAN QUAIN TALK TO YOUNG PEOPLE

Address by Anglican Churchman at Presbyterian Church

On Monday evening the Very Rev. Dean Quainton will give a lecture in the lecture room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church under the auspices of the Young People's Society.

The subject which the Dean has chosen is "Humor and Pathos of a Person's Life." Dean Quainton needs no introduction to Victorians and it is with great pleasure that he will be welcomed to the Society on Monday next. By all appearances the subject which he has chosen will prove to be most interesting, when two sides of a person's life will be heard.

During the past two months the Young People's Society have presented several exceedingly interesting lectures which have been open to the public. An address was recently given by G. Matheson, a recent graduate of the University of Saskatchewan, when he gave an address or talk on various experiences students meet on the mission fields of the prairie provinces.

TRANSMIGRATION OR REINCARNATION?

The concluding lecture and discussion on reincarnation will engage the Victoria Theosophical Society (Independent) on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock on the subject, "Transmigration or Reincarnation?"

Errors and misconceptions concerning reincarnation will be dealt with. The meeting is freely open to the public and questions are invited.

MUCH ACTIVITY AT ST. ALBAN'S CHURCH

Rev. G. A. Wilson, D.D., of Vancouver, will preach at St. Alban's Church, Mount Tolmie, to-morrow at 11 a.m. His message should be of much interest to members and adherents of the church.

St. Alban's is showing much activity in every branch of church work. The Ladies' Guild recently held a very successful Valentine bazaar. A United Service for fathers and sons and for mothers and daughters was held on Sunday morning and was followed by a social which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The boys and girls did their part very well. After the program, did and young joined in games for which the new hall provided ample room. A Scotch concert, the programme of which was provided by Piper Major Cameron and his orchestra, was presented by local talent, was very much enjoyed.

The choir has been augmented by the addition of several new voices, and the service of praise.

A Young People's Society has been organized recently to provide for the needs of the district. The Sunday School is in a healthy condition with a staff of efficient officers and teachers.

Material improvements made recently include new furnaces, which have been installed in the church and hall, and a new roof is to be added to the church, which has served this community for over thirty years.

The series of later lectures given monthly on Sunday evening by Felix Raper, have been spiritually profitable and greatly enjoyed by the congregation. He will deliver another of these lectures on February 27, at 7 p.m. The subject will be "Marked Events in the Life of Our Lord."

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Dr. A. F. Barton will speak on "Physical Wholeness" at the New Thought Temple, and in the evening at 7:30 he will take for his topic "The Rediscovery of Jesus Through New Thought."

At the midweek service on Wednesday evening Dr. Barton will speak on "The Law of Suggestion."

Catholic Meeting.—The members of the Victoria Catholic League will hold a work meeting at the home of Mrs. C. E. Wilson, the Uplands, on Monday at 8 p.m.

Annual Banquet.—Princess Alexandra, No. 18, Daughters and Maids of England, will hold their annual banquet on Thursday, February 25, at 8 p.m. in the Harmony Hall, Port Street. A concert will also take place at 8:30 for members and their invited friends. Members are asked to please telephone 7452Y2 or 7307L, or otherwise they will not be catered for.

A THOUGHTLESS WIFE PLAYING WITH FIRE

By MILDRED BARBOUR

Copyright, 1926, Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York.

She patted Charlotte's arm vigorously. "But never you mind, you'll get off all right. They never do anything to a good-looking girl and especially one like you. Anybody can see it's all a mistake. You don't belong here. Now me," she shrugged, her slim shoulders and made an impudent little grimace, "I'm used to it, kind of. I dance in a cabaret in the Thirties off Broadway. We've been pinched a couple of times and we must go to the coop along with the rest of the bunch; it ain't so bad once you get used to it."

"I guess my friend will be coming with the bail pretty soon." She extracted a powder puff from her bag and rubbed it energetically over her face. "He's the manager of the joint where I work, and when you get out and you will, all right, take it from me—drop in some time and we will laugh about the night we spent in the coop together. I'm Gypsy Adair. See, here's my card and the address is on it."

She extended a bit of paste board to Charlotte who thrust it into the pocket of her wrap.

"You are very kind," Charlotte said gravely. "I think they are coming for you now and I am glad you are going to get out of this dreadful place as soon as possible."

"It isn't so soon at that," the girl laughed, as the figure of the guard again loomed in the corridor. "I've been in since eight o'clock. We were having a quick dinner at the little roadhouse not far from here when the row started and we got pinched. I don't go to work until eleven but I guess it's too late now and that means a night's kale gone bloozy, not to mention the bail, which is sure to be fierce."

She rose as the guard opened the cell door and gave Charlotte's hand a quick, warm pressure.

"So long! Good luck to you. Don't worry. Everything is sure to be all right. Just show them your ankles and smile your prettiest."

She went away blithely and it seemed to Charlotte that another friend had passed. She was here alone in a filthy jail, probably held on a murder charge with no one to turn to for assistance.

This is what Lawrence Hill had finally done to her. This was the ghastly result of the innocent little game that she had once thought it so smart to play.

THE LAWYER FOR THE DEFENSE

The night passed without Charlotte having closed her eyes.

She had been removed from the cell where the other women were, and placed in another where she was alone. The latter was equally cold and dingy and dreary. She drew her light over her bare shoulders and shivered. The little bit of air that came in through the grating at the window was warm in contrast with the clamminess of the interior.

She looked at the narrow pallet that served as a bed, at the soiled blankets that covered it and shuddered away from the horridness of the vermin which probably infested it.

When morning came, she was still sitting on the narrow camp stool that was the only chair her cell boasted. Blowing on knees, her chin cupped in her palms, she stared at the gray light that indicated the window and watched it grow brighter as dawn broke over the sleeping world.

Some time after the sun was up, she was given a breakfast of rank coffee and dry bread. She tried to eat but the food choked her and she returned again to her listless task of watching the sunlight grow brighter and the radiant summer morning unfold outside her barred window.

Some time later, she received a traveling bag with a few necessities and a change of garments, brought to the jail by her maid. She was also informed that she would be permitted to communicate with friends and to summon a lawyer to defend her.

Anti-Divorce Club to Help Newlyweds to Pass First Year Crisis

Philadelphia, Feb. 20.—Because they believe that the first year is the most difficult for newlywed couples, a group of trustees, headed by William H. Voltz, of Philadelphia, member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, has filed at Trenton, N.J., incorporation papers for the First Year Club, which will be dedicated to checking the divorce evil.

Mr. Voltz said the organization of the club was prompted by the belief that if tactful counsel were resorted to instead of the courts a great percentage of the legal separations among newlywed persons would disappear.

The incorporation papers specify these six purposes: First, promotion of social activities in the community; second, promotion of harmonious relationship between couples in their first year of married life; third, establishment of club rooms, first in Philadelphia, and later in all important population centres of the United States and Canada; fourth, advancement on all problems of vital interest to brides and bridegrooms during the first year of married life, with a view to solving them; fifth, establishment, as soon as possible, of practical classes in cooking, infant hygiene, home economics, beauty culture and dressmaking; sixth, emphasis of the need of happy marriages as a necessity for better citizenship.

"Because young married people, who have not yet had an opportunity to become thoroughly adjusted to each other, find differences arising between them, it has become habitual these days to take their troubles to the courts, whereas a little fatherly or motherly advice was all that they needed to bridge the crisis," Mr. Voltz said.

"We propose to establish clubs in which the same advice shall make it their duty to give this help when it is needed."

The First Year Club will have no initiation fees and dues will be free. Membership among those married longer than a year will be solicited.

NINE-MONTH SENTENCE

Saskatoon, Feb. 20.—Fred Thomas, twenty-four, yesterday was sent to jail for nine months at hard labor for theft of 70,000 cigarettes, valued at $340, from the Early Fruit Company. It was his first offence. Thomas had been discharged by the firm shortly before stealing the cigarettes.

SHANGHAI JAIL OUTBREAK CAUSE OF NINE DEATHS

London, Feb. 20.—The London Daily Mail's Shanghai correspondent says the riot at the French municipal jail in Shanghai on Thursday, in which five Chinese prisoners were killed and eleven wounded during an attempt of 100 men to escape from the jail, was the culmination of two years of plotting.

The leaders in the attempted jail delivery, after having filed off their shackles, opened the doors of forty cells with a master key and the prisoners overpowered the warden.

After the riot had been suppressed four convicts hanged themselves.

MUTT AND JEFF

JEFF, AS WE'RE GONNA DINE WITH PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE THIS EVENING I'M GONNA POLISH UP YOUR TABLE MANNERS A BIT.

I'M GONNA PAY A LOT OF ATTENTION TO MRS. COOLIDGE'S DOG! THAT WILL PLEASE HER!

THE MORE FUSS I MAKE ABOUT HER DOG THE MORE SHE'LL LIKE ME!

FORGET ABOUT THE DOG AND IMAGINE YOU'RE IN THE WHITE HOUSE DINING ROOM! BE SEATED!

MRS. COOLIDGE, THIS IS A VERY DELICIOUS STEAK! WHERE DO YOU BUY YOUR MEAT?

COMMENT ON THE FOOD BUT DON'T ASK WHERE SHE BUYS IT!

WHAT ARE YOU DOING NOW?

I JUST TOSSED A PIECE OF MEAT TO THE DOG!

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, OWING TO CIRCUMSTANCES OVER WHICH I HAVE NO CONTROL IT WILL BE IMPOSSIBLE FOR ME AND JEFF TO DINE WITH YOU AND MRS. COOLIDGE THIS EVENING!

REGIMENTAL ACTIVITIES

FIFTH BRIGADE C.A.

Regimental orders by Lieut.-Col. J. C. Harris, commanding. Capt. M. A. Kent will assume command of the 12th Siege Heavy Battery.

At times the speaker had noted an undercurrent of opposition, and urged the need for complete harmony. "I will not touch on what happened last year, the sooner we forget it the better. If I am to continue to be associated with this body, there must be unity, otherwise we shall never get anywhere," he said. As a result of his experience of the past two years, associating with many political workers, President Stubbs expressed dissatisfaction with affairs. "We have heard that far, but I believe that patronage is at the bottom of much of the trouble," he asserted, declaring that many workers would be seeking re-employment as soon as the party comes into office, the result being that there are now four times as many government employees as are necessary to carry on the business of Canada and the Province.

"I have been told by a prominent business man of Victoria that, when recently passing through the Parliament Buildings' basement, he found men seeking cover there with nothing to do but shake, and that over a hundred idlers in the basement were seen."

Mr. Stubbs appealed for solid support for Hon. Mr. Coventry as the representative of the Saanich. "We had not but him in five minutes before a faction was at work trying to get rid of him. We shall never get anywhere if he is not loyally supported, and I am confident that, when the time comes and our party is in power, we will find Mr. Coventry loyal to us."

DUE TO PRESSURE. Mr. Stubbs declared his candidature for re-election as president to be due to pressure, his preference being to withdraw. "I look for loyalty; if there are any here who have criticism to voice, now is the time to voice it, else hereafter hold your peace," he said, concluding amid applause.

Vice-President Sherwood having renominated Mr. Stubbs, and W. O. Wallace declining a nomination in favor of President Stubbs' retention of office, Vice-President Sherwood declared nomination closed, the acclamation being greeted with applause.

Acclamations were also accorded First Vice-President A. R. Sherwood and Second Vice-President Mrs. F. F. Osborne for re-election. W. O. Wallace being named third vice-president, Secretary J. P. Hibben and Treasurer Major J. P. Hibben were re-elected unanimously.

Selection of the various committees was entrusted to the executive committee.

MEMBER GIVES VIEWS. Hon. T. G. Coventry, member for Saanich in the Provincial Legislature, congratulated Saanich Conservatives on the excellent executive chosen. He was gratified with the excellent personnel of the various ward association executives, as he speaking the strength of Conservatism in Saanich.

"The Liberal Party is coming to the end of its tether in this Province, the chief reason being that the Provincial Party supporters are falling in line with us. If we use common

CONSERVATIVES OF SAANICH STRIVE TO END TROUBLE

Faction Tried to Oust Coventry Five Minutes After Election

Former Secretary Still Holds Books Annual Meeting Told

The Saanich Conservative Association selected all its officers by acclamation last night at its annual meeting held in the Conservative rooms in the Campbell Building, there being sixty men and women present when President William Stubbs opened proceedings at 7.30 o'clock.

Secretary Patterson reported that his predecessor has retained possession of the books and records prior to his supersession in July, and over $100 in the bank had been unavailable. Since July satisfactory progress had been made, socially and financially. A successful joint picnic, with the North Saanich Conservative Association, had been held at Regis Cove, and a dance had recently been held by the association.

The results of the recent Dominion election had placed him in a difficult position, a record vote being registered in favor of C. H. Dickie. Mr. Patterson closed with an assurance that "financially the Saanich Conservative Association is in excellent condition, being accorded a round of applause."

President William Stubbs recalled as "somewhat unfortunate" the circumstances which had placed him in office last July, when President W. O. Wallace had resigned. He pointed out that refusal to accept promotion from the first vice-presidency would have lent color to the rumors of a split in the party since proven groundless.

SEEKS UNITY

At times the speaker had noted an undercurrent of opposition, and urged the need for complete harmony. "I will not touch on what happened last year, the sooner we forget it the better. If I am to continue to be associated with this body, there must be unity, otherwise we shall never get anywhere," he said. "The Liberal Party is coming to the end of its tether in this Province, the chief reason being that the Provincial Party supporters are falling in line with us. If we use common discretion the Provincial Party will not arise again, and it is going to be a clean Conservative sweep at the next Provincial election," he prophesied.

Mr. Coventry poured scorn on the independent members of the Legislature, declaring they answered the call of the Liberal whip on all occasions, and should label themselves frankly as Liberals. This, to his mind, was the cause of the difficulty in defeating the Government on a vote in the House.

Criticizing Attorney-General Manson's administration of his department, as being "the weak link in the Liberal Party," Mr. Coventry objected to the reported witnessing, by a hundred spectators, of a recent hanging.

Victoria's Private Bill to validate the Esquimalt waterworks appropriation was touched on by Mr. Coventry with praise for the skillful presentation of the Saanich case by Reeve Macnicol and Clerk Sewell, this having resulted in inclusion in the bill of all the Saanich requests, despite the presence of eleven lay-years at the hearing.

Advancing Saanich to press for paying by the Province of Verder Avenue and part of West Saanich Road, impaired when traffic was diverted from the Malahat, Mr. Coventry assured the meeting that his services were always at the disposal of his constituents.

OPPOSED TO PATRONAGE

Touching on patronage, Mr. Coventry declared the Conservative Party to be opposed to patronage in any form, and that, particularly in government service, it does not go to some civil servant as promotion, it is given to some unknown from Prince Rupert, Greenwood or some other neck of the woods. He closed with an assurance of confidence in Mr. Pooley as leader of the party.

BLAMES GOVERNMENT FOR FREE SPENDING

Party Organizer Speaker at Saanich Conservative Meeting

R. L. Maitland of Vancouver, last night at the Conservative rooms in the Campbell Building addressed an audience of over one hundred men and women, being the chief speaker following the annual meeting of the Saanich Conservative Association.

Mr. Maitland praised Hon. T. G. Coventry as an excellent servant of Saanich and the Province, president of the Opposition has ever been popular.

None expected the Right Hon. R. L. Borden to become Premier of Canada, but Mr. Maitland declared that no leader of the Opposition has ever been popular.

Discussing briefly the Federal situation, Mr. Maitland was scornful of Hon. W. Mackenzie King for holding office by all means at his disposal with a minority support, while a few months ago he had asked Baron Byng for dissolution because government of the country was impossible with the slender majority then at his back.

"We have not the confidence of the investing public because they are afraid that, when they have become involved in large investments, this or that free-spending saboteur will bring down such legislation as will ruin their development and make hopeless the successful operation of their industries."

McBRIDE-BOWSER DAYS
"The McBride-Bowser Government built bridges and roads, built up the Province and went out with little debt behind them after carrying on with $5,000,000 a year."

"To-day we have a Government which spends yearly $15,000,000, which has taxed anything and everything. No man is going to come here and build up any industry when they see this Province, with its miserable little population, has a public debt of $75,000,000 and also has a $20,000,000 debt on the P.G.E., which is described as an 'asset'."

Mr. Maitland declared the Government to be carrying on its business unconstitutionally, citing the University Buildings at Vancouver as an instance, with $700,000 expended without authority.

He looks at the Policy Varden business, thinks that may have been an oversight, but finds the Sumas farmers assessed $4,000,000, saddled with double costs and robbed of their lands. "And so we go on, ever since 1916, gigantic blunder after blunder by this Government, until we have built up a debt of $95,000,000, every dollar bearing interest, all meaning taxes," he said.

Mr. Maitland considered the Succession Duties Act to be a potent deterrent to moneyed people who would otherwise come to British Columbia.

SOLDIER SETTLEMENT
"That cannot go on if we are to retain confidence in this Province."

$500,000 has been spent on Soldier Settlement lands, but no wise policy has been settled for the administration of these lands.

"And so we go on, ever since 1916, gigantic blunder after blunder by this Government, until we have built up a debt of $95,000,000, every dollar bearing interest, all meaning taxes," he said.

The purest tea cannot be bulk tea in open chests exposed to the mixed odors of a grocery store, but the kind that comes in airtight packets fresh from the plantation, that is Blue Ribbon Tea.

"No man can come to a country with a Government which has bungled and bungled."

"How can we remedy these conditions? By putting in office a Government which will cut expenses, and that can never be done by a Liberal Government. There is not a minister in Victoria to-night big enough to cut down the costs of running the Government. There is no hope save to put in the only Conservative party to cut down expenses," declared the speaker.

Hon. John Oliver's freight rates were criticized by the speaker, declaring the Conservative policy to be to refuse to consider freight rates a political issue. "Holshivism" was alleged to have been uttered by Premier Oliver, who was charged with having stated in Alberta that freight rates imperil Confederation and to have asserted in Vancouver that Confederation has not been a complete success.

"How has John Oliver fallen from the height of such a great Liberal as George Brown, who fought for Confederation?" Mr. Maitland stated the Province of British Columbia to have a legal right to the Peace River block, and unalienated railway belt lands, as these areas had been transferred to the Dominion "in trust," solely to further construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The speaker forecast an early attempt by Premier Oliver to advance this argument as a discovery of his legal advisers, whereas the authority of the whole case was Geo. H. Cowan, K.C., of Vancouver, who has fought for better terms for more than twenty years. Mr. Maitland said in conclusion his address.

One way of carrying a law case to a higher court is to elevate the judge's chair. That is the means employed in James Cruze's latest production, "Beggar on Horseback," when Everett Horton appeals his case next week on the Playhouse screen. No one could blame Horton for wanting a different court, because members of the jury are dressed like undertakers. The judge smokes a cigar a foot long, while the jury pours tea. One of the women who is charged with killing sits in the courtroom and knits with an enormous pair of needles. The whole thing is not as scandalous as it would seem, however, because Horton is dreaming. The "dreams" sequence is the feature of this novel and lavishly produced photoplay.

"Beggar on Horseback" is the limit in laughter, and will prove a thrills and chills for Playhouse patrons all next week.

"No man can come to a country with a Government which has bungled and bungled."

"How can we remedy these conditions? By putting in office a Government which will cut expenses, and that can never be done by a Liberal Government. There is not a minister in Victoria to-night big enough to cut down the costs of running the Government. There is no hope save to put in the only Conservative party to cut down expenses," declared the speaker.

Hon. John Oliver's freight rates were criticized by the speaker, declaring the Conservative policy to be to refuse to consider freight rates a political issue. "Holshivism" was alleged to have been uttered by Premier Oliver, who was charged with having stated in Alberta that freight rates imperil Confederation and to have asserted in Vancouver that Confederation has not been a complete success.

"How has John Oliver fallen from the height of such a great Liberal as George Brown, who fought for Confederation?" Mr. Maitland stated the Province of British Columbia to have a legal right to the Peace River block, and unalienated railway belt lands, as these areas had been transferred to the Dominion "in trust," solely to further construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The speaker forecast an early attempt by Premier Oliver to advance this argument as a discovery of his legal advisers, whereas the authority of the whole case was Geo. H. Cowan, K.C., of Vancouver, who has fought for better terms for more than twenty years. Mr. Maitland said in conclusion his address.

Nine Million Population for British Columbia And Seventy-one Million for the Dominion of Canada

DEAN BROCK MAKES FORECAST AS HE PEERS INTO THE FUTURE FOR THE NEXT HUNDRED YEARS

"Last Century Was the United States," Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said. "This Century Is Canada's," Says Dean of Faculty of Applied Science of B.C. University. United States Jumped From 5,000,000 to 75,000,000 in Her Century But Conditions Are Better for Canada

THIS is Canada's century. The last century was the United States' century. Canada in her century will reach a population of 71,000,000. British Columbia during that period cannot have a population of less than 9,000,000. Peering into the future for the next 100 years, Dr. R. W. Brock, M.A., LL.D., F.G.S., F.R.S.C., makes these remarks and then adds to the quotation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. "The last century was the United States' century." A population for Canada of 71,000,000 in her century is held out as a well-founded hope by the doctor, who, as Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science and Professor of Geology at the University of British Columbia, is known throughout Canada as one of the clearest thinkers of the present day.

DOUBLE EVERY THIRTY YEARS

In her century, Dean Brock points out, the United States increased her population from 5,000,000 to 75,000,000, or doubled it on the average every thirty years. Europe sent her surplus population to the United States, and the conditions should be better for Canada, for Europe is much nearer the population saturation point now than she was then, and should have a much greater surplus for emigration.

Another section of the dean's interesting argument deals more particularly with British Columbia. Describing British Columbia as the Pacific Gateway of Canada and the Empire, he says as Pacific trade develops, as Canada fills up the Province the population will grow. In the century he specifies British Columbia cannot have a population of less than 9,000,000, he claims.

100,000,000 POPULATION SIR GEORGE PREDICTS

Lest Dean Brock's remarks should appear to be over optimistic, it is interesting to note that he is not alone in his opinion. One hundred million population is the forecast of Sir George E. Foster. A news item from London contains the information. It reads: "Sir George E. Foster, president of the Canadian branch of the League of Nations, addressing the London Canadian Club on the British Empire, prophesied that in 10 years Canada would have a population of 100,000,000, and would be one of the foremost countries in the world."

AS MANY AS THE EARTH CAN SUPPORT

In 100 years or 200 years or 450 years, according to what factors enter limiting population, the earth will be saturated with humans—there will be as many as the earth can support, says Dean Brock. That is to say, in a space of time equal to that which has elapsed since Canada became British, at all events, in a space of time equal to that in which Canada has figured in history, when the Court House is as old as some of the buildings in Quebec, the world and, therefore, Canada will have as many inhabitants as it can hold.

Since Canada is one of the desirable lands for settlement it will be filled long before the world is saturated.

AS MANY AS THE EARTH CAN SUPPORT

In 150 or 200 years or 450 years, according to what factors enter limiting population, the earth will be saturated with humans—there will be as many as the earth can support, says Dean Brock. That is to say, in a space of time equal to that which has elapsed since Canada became British, at all events, in a space of time equal to that in which Canada has figured in history, when the Court House is as old as some of the buildings in Quebec, the world and, therefore, Canada, will have as many inhabitants as it can hold.

Since Canada is one of the desirable lands for settlement it will be filled long before the world is saturated.

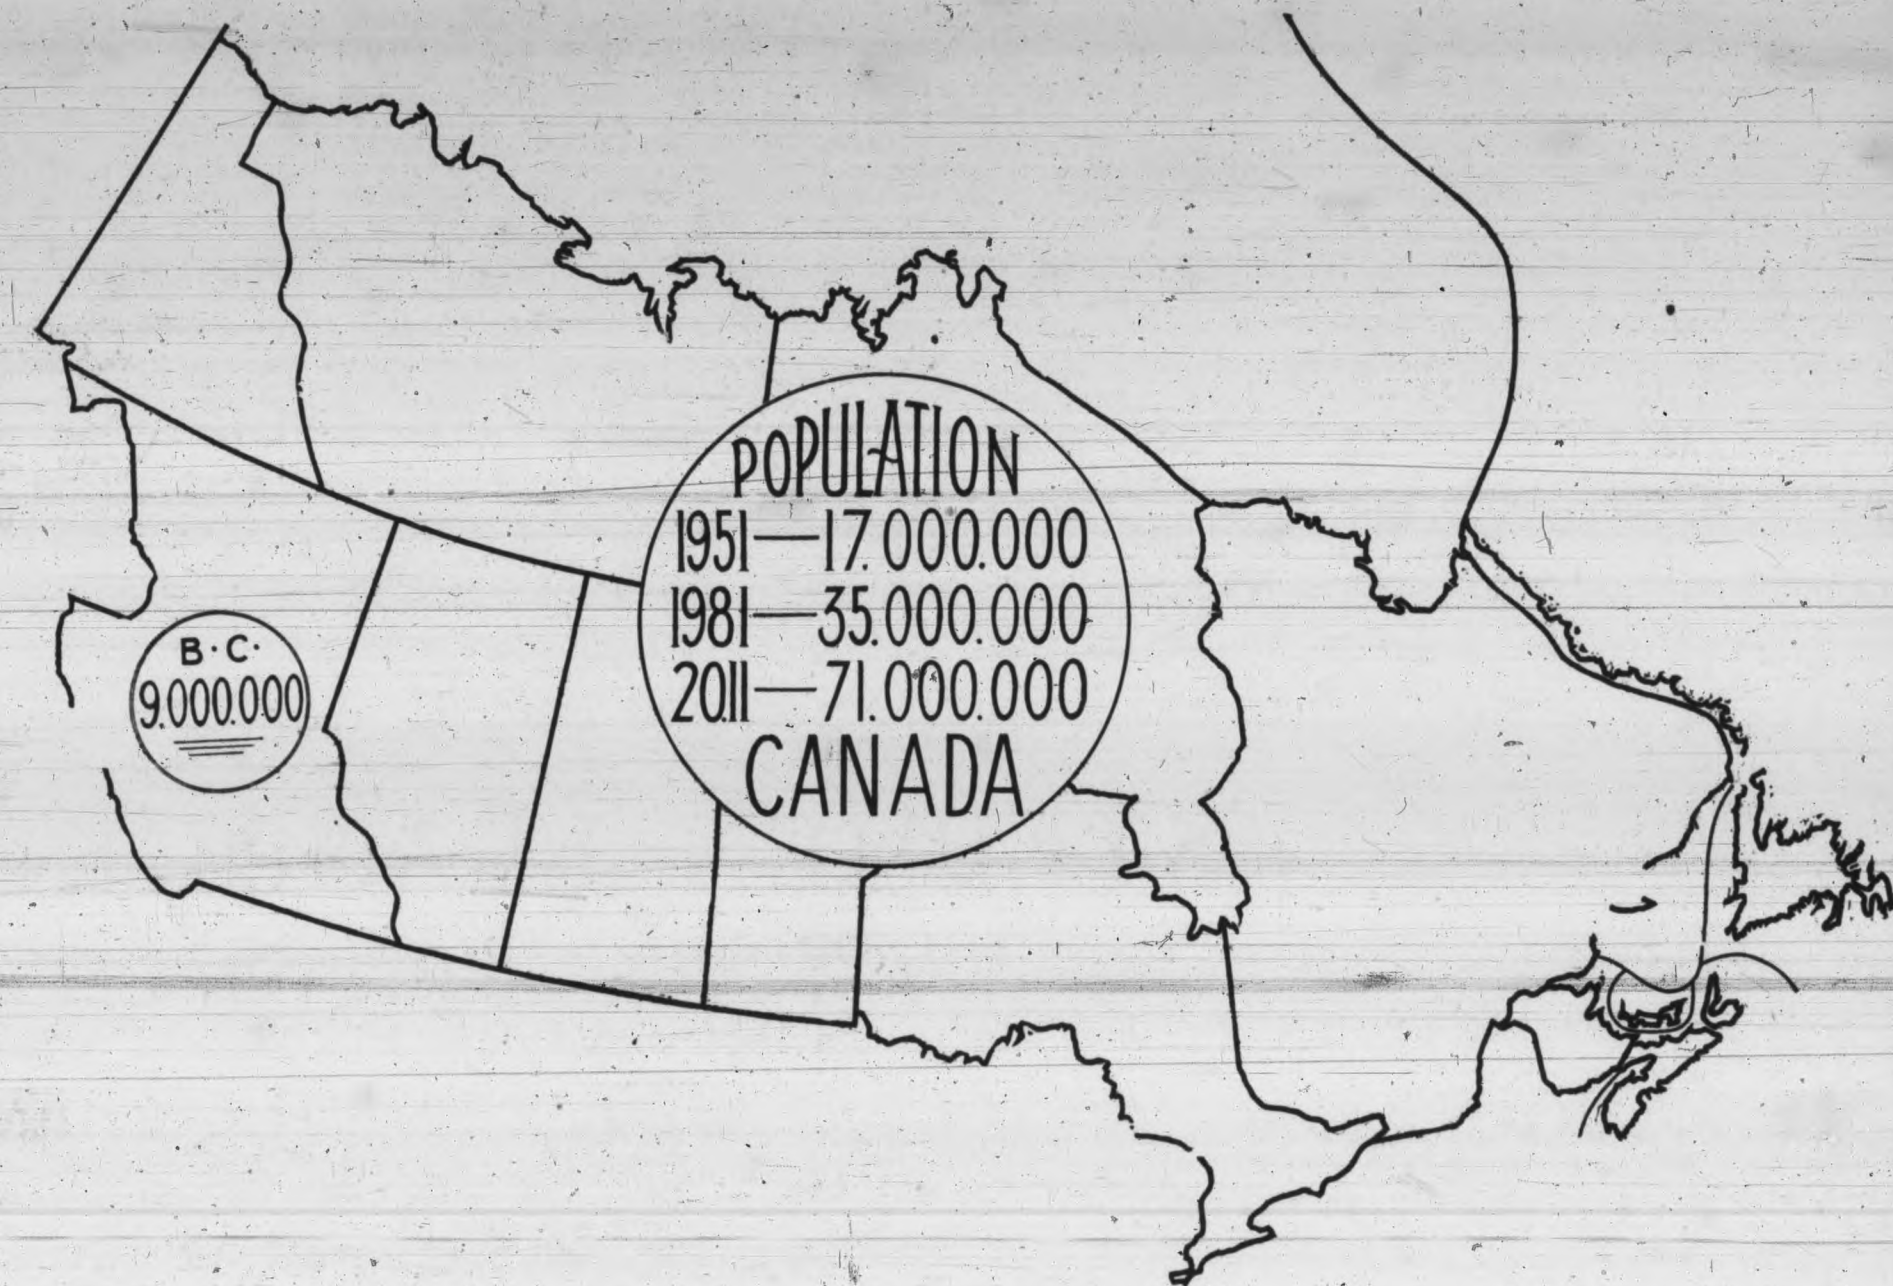

The ratio between production and population is likely to increase. The Eastern peoples, the great masses of humanity, are just beginning to awaken to the possibilities of Western life.

When India and China demand as much iron and coal per capita as Europe and America, that ration will bound upward, without any further increase in population.

But population is steadily mounting.

DORMANT RESOURCES PRESSED INTO SERVICE

How are such vast quantities of products to be supplied? Well, resources now lying dormant will be pressed into service. Capital will be forthcoming for this purpose. Look at the railway curve. The world has finished the major portion of its railway building.

This releases enormous capital for the development of natural resources. Organized intelligence and awareness, that we call applied science, can do much to meet this increasing demand. And that, by the way, is why educational facilities in applied science are absolutely essential. To take one's place in supplying the great oncoming demand, to get one's share in this world trade, this increasing world's trade, we must have the same organized intelligence and awareness as our competitors. For this reason I have no hesitation in asking you and all others interested in the development of the industries of British Columbia for support for the Faculty of Applied Science. The question is not can British Columbia afford to have it, but can she afford not to have it?

CANADA'S CENTURY

We cannot take time to follow this line of discussion—I think we have pursued it far enough to make it clear that the great unoccupied areas of Canada are going to be in demand in the very near future. As Sir Wilfrid Laurier put it, "Last century was the United States' century," this is Canada's century.

In her century the United States increased her population from five millions to seventy-five millions, or doubled it, on the average, every thirty years.

GREATER SURPLUS OF EMIGRATION

Conditions for Canada should be better. During the past century Europe sent out surplus population to America, but herself doubled her population. Europe is much nearer the population saturation point now than she was then, and should have a much greater surplus for emigration. And European conditions are worse.

If Canada grows, as did the United States, she will have over seventeen millions by 1951, over thirty-five millions by 1981 and about seventy-one millions in the next thirty years.

British Columbia is the Pacific

Gateway of Canada and the Empire. As Pacific trade develops, as Canada fills up, that means a large population.

But British Columbia is much more than a gateway, she has much besides shipping and transportation that will employ men.

It is an empire of 356,000 square miles with great natural resources, mines, forest, farm, fisheries, water power and manufacturing possibilities.

It is not well enough known or explored to make very accurate estimates of its possibilities, but but one can get rough estimates that will show the order of magnitude.

Our estimate of fifty doesn't seem extravagant.

BRITISH SETTLEMENT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

There is, however, a better angle. British don't pack themselves as tightly as some other Europeans. Compare the resources of Scotland and S.W. England with those of British Columbia, then the population of these districts will give a clue as to the possibilities of British settlement of British Columbia.

	Counties of Scotland and S.W. England	B.C. in Future
Primary Industries	700,000	1,100,000
Manufactures	1,200,000	1,900,000
Commerce	400,000	630,000
Other Occupations	1,000,000	1,600,000
Total occupied	3,300,000	5,230,000
Others	4,200,000	6,600,000
	7,500,000	11,830,000

That is a very conservative estimate.

Now I know that you can question these figures. They are only rough estimates. None of them will prove correct, but the errors will probably compensate each other. And what you cannot overthrow is the general order of magnitude.

Considering world conditions, British Columbia cannot have a population of less than nine million, and she is likely to have very many more.

In all plans that effect the future, this fact of a large population to come should be taken into account.

NOT JUSTIFIED IN CAPITAL EXPENDITURES

On the other hand, while optimists as to the future, we haven't the population yet, and do not know the year in which we shall have it. So we are not justified in capital expenditures that are not at the moment necessary.

A very good example of how not to do it is furnished by our town planning—save the mark!

Plan on the unit system with adequate facilities for expansion.

A country doesn't become great, it doesn't even become prosperous, because of either resources or number of inhabitants.

It is great or prosperous only to extent its inhabitants make it so.

The first column of figures of the table below shows the relative value of possible products per square mile, while the second column shows the exports per capita in dollars, 1920:

Iceland	12	5
New Guinea	11	10
Formosa	10	400
Hawaii	10	200
New Zealand	6	200
Cyprus	3	20
Iceland	2	100

India's foreign commerce is only one and a half times that of Canada—one Canadian is worth thirty Indians as far as prosperity is concerned.

TESTS SHOW VALUE OF RACE

Value of race shown by United States army tests, possible twenty-six—British average, 14.5; U.S. white, 13.7; foreign down to 10.7.

Percentage in highest intelligence grades—England, 19.7; Scotland, 13; U.S. white, 12.1; foreign, 4; lowest, .5.

Distinguished scientists in America of British stock—87 per cent; German, 8 per cent; others, 5 per cent.

British 1.2 per cent of population, 3.4 per cent of distinguished scientists; Germany 2.1 per cent of population, 1.4 per cent of distinguished scientists; Russia, 1.7 per cent of population, .6 per cent of distinguished scientists; Italy 1.5 per cent of population, .4 per cent of distinguished scientists.

Professions, 43 per cent, or 14 times as many per capita; manufacture, 35 per cent, or two times as many per capita; agriculture, 21 per cent.

per cent from yeomen, 2 per cent from laboring classes.

While what a man actually accomplishes depends on many factors, it is clear that what he can accomplish depends on his ancestry.

What we want in British Columbia is not so much numbers as quality.

So whether our standpoint is patriotism or merely material welfare we want dominantly British and then Nordic stock.

Our greatest asset is not our material resources, but our stock.

Employ the youth here so it can remain here.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES OF A GREAT COUNTRY

We have a great country with great possibilities.

The most beautiful and attractive land there is; but what it becomes, its future prosperity, its future greatness depends upon you and me. That is an enormous responsibility which we cannot evade.

A century from now shall we be honored as empire builders who built both wisely and well, or shall we be execrated as stupid asses that repeated every mistake made since man undertook to work with nature, who, with the experiences of forty-eight states, half a dozen provinces to warn us, cheerfully repeated all their outstanding blunders?

Ex-Kaiser's Chef Tells of Lucullan Feasts When Hohenzollerns Ruled

By WILLE BUENGER
Chief Cook of the Palace Staff of the late German Emperor

As I am descended from a long line of cooks, I was initiated into this profession in my early boyhood, and while still an apprentice was attached to the officers' mess of the most exclusive of the elite regiments of the old German army. This was the First Regiment of Footguards, who served as the Kaiser's body-guard.

In my time the old traditions of this regiment were still preserved. Every officer was a member of the ancient East-Prussian nobility. All the Hohenzollern princes became lieutenants when they were ten years old, and were promoted rapidly so that they usually were captains by their eighteenth or twentieth year. This was the regiment so often attacked in the Reichstag—particularly because only noblemen were permitted to become officers.

Finally, as a concession to public opinion, one or two young officers from the best middle-class families were admitted—but their fathers were promptly given titles.

Naturally this regiment had serious social responsibilities. Once a week a formal dinner was given at which every officer was required to be present. First there was a game, and afterwards food was served. The headquarters were at Potsdam, and when William II. was residing at the Potsdam Palace he was often present on these occasions. He would walk over to the Regimental Club accompanied only by his adjutant and would drink a few glasses of wine there in the midst of the officers. A couple of these gentlemen, invariably members of the highest nobility, always kept close to him to assist him home if necessary.

But though the Kaiser loved a little wine, he was strong against gambling. Indeed, so strict was he on this point that any officer who fell seriously into debt on account of high playing was promptly cashiered. He would come over to the club accompanied by his two magnificent horses, a gift from Tsar Nicholas II. I often fed the dogs, who would rush around to the kitchen to greet me. Though I received no high decorations for this service, it brought me a liberal tip now and then from His Majesty.

One of the regiment's privileges in the so-called Adlerkitchen in Catherine Forest near Potsdam. The whole royal family would be present on these occasions, and the Kaiser always gave a valuable prize to the best shot. A cold luncheon with coffee, tea, champagne, and fine pastries was served in the woods. Usually the affair lasted until noon. A little incident that happened to me will show how exclusive the gentlemen who attended were. I was ordered to ride out to the place where luncheon was to be served in a vehicle carrying several young officers. Naturally I was seated on the box by the driver. When we were going pretty rapidly, my hat blew off and fell into the carriage and on to the lap of one of the young gentlemen. He stared at it with a look of disgust, as if it had been a reptile. Instead of tossing it back to me, he ordered the carriage to stop. I had to get up and, apologizing profusely, to pick up my hat myself, as none of the officers would touch it.

Later, I was promoted to the palace kitchen in Berlin. The Kaiser was then at the zenith of his fame and power, and the kitchen staff was kept pretty busy. But traditional Prussian economy was never forgotten. In fact, His Majesty, despite his love of royal pomp, managed to save 1,000,000 marks or so every year out of his civil list of 14,000,000 marks. As soon as he ascended to the throne he abolished the French menus that had been introduced by his grandfather, William I, and substituted German menus for them. The two famous French chefs, M. Bernad and M. Dubois, were also replaced by German chefs. That probably did not worry those gentlemen very much, as they had managed to put aside 1,000,000 marks of their own. The new staff were paid much lower salaries, but no one left, because the service was very agreeable, especially in respect to working-hours, and we all looked forward to the usual pension when we retired.

As an example of William II's economy, under his grandfather the cost of all state banquets was fixed at a lump sum for which the chef drew against the Marshal of the Court. For instance, an appropriation of 14,500 thalers, or 43,500 marks, was made for the Coronation Dinner at Konigsberg on January 2, 1861. As there were 250 persons present, the cost was something over fifty-eight thalers, or 174 marks, a plate. But William II was more businesslike. He allotted a maximum per head for all his State dinners. The limit for a royal banquet was twenty marks, or five dollars; for a formal dinner, fifteen marks; and for a family dinner, refreshments at a court ball, or a supper, ten marks. This did not include the cost of the wines.

Our kitchen staff consisted of a first chef, his assistant, and several apprentices, a pastry cook, and a coffee cook—altogether about thirty-two people. The chef had a salary of 6,800 marks in lieu of lodgings and other perquisites. The beginning salary for a cook, who had to be unusually well qualified, was 3,200 marks, or 10,000 American dollars, a month, plus twenty marks for lodgings and five marks a day when traveling on duty. The first chef never did any actual cooking. He merely paraded around in a black suit and bossed the others. But he had one very responsible task, and that was drawing up the menus. Most of the palace servants were given a regular cash allotment in lieu of board. This made the work of the kitchen staff very simple and was decidedly cheaper for the Kaiser.

At 8 a.m. the Emperor and Empress took breakfast together. This meal consisted generally of coffee, cream, tea, butter, eggs, cold meat, jam, toast, and Vienna rolls. Before a hunt there would be a warm meat-course in addition. The Kaiser liked to eat fresh fruit about ten o'clock. Since he did not have the full use of his left arm, this fruit had to be pared and cut in pieces before it was served. He was very clever in concealing his physical defect. He had his own combination knife and fork which he used with a single hand and took with him wherever he went. Woe to the valet or body-servant who forgot to pack it!

In making out the menus the Emperor's physical defect had always to be considered. Dishes must be served to him so they could be eaten easily. Fish must be boned, lobsters taken out of their shells, and fowl cut from the bone. The Kaiser's favorite sweet was a rich vanilla ice-cream with melted chocolate poured over it. The Kaiser abhorred the vulgar word "sauce."

One of his two favorite dishes was prepared as follows: A well-hung joint was pounded tender, wrapped in long strips of bacon, and immersed in claret with whole peppers, parsley, onion, thyme, and a few laurel leaves, where it was allowed to pickle for four days, being frequently turned during the interval. Then it was taken out, carefully drained, and well browned in lard with a few calves' knuckles and feet. The parsley, raw ham, claret, and some of the veal gravy had meanwhile been allowed to simmer for two or three hours. As soon as the meat was taken out of the oven it was dressed with this gravy thickened with a little Mondamin, to which the meat taken from the calves' feet was added in the form of tiny dice. The Kaiser was very fond of this served with potato, green princess beans, and spinach.

Another of the Emperor's favorite dishes was sole prepared as follows: The sole was held for a moment by the tail in boiling water, so that the skin could be easily removed. It was then boned without breaking the flesh and the spinal groove filled with stuffing of truffles and devilled pickles. The fish was then sewed together, laid in a buttered pan with chopped shallot, covered with white wine and champagne, and with raw mushrooms cut in slices, and sprinkled with shredded spinach. It was then well covered and allowed to cook for ten minutes. The fish was then taken out, the gravy allowed to cook a little longer, thickened with Mondamin, and sweet cream and butter added. The fish was then put in a porcelain cooking dish, dressed with the gravy, and covered with grated Parmesan cheese and bread crumbs, after which a little drawn butter was added. It was then browned in an oven.

The young princes and princesses, over whom the Emperor watched with the utmost solicitude, were served their meals separately. As long as they were children, their breakfast consisted principally of milk and rolled oats. After that they had a little very weak tea with milk, or cocoa, jam, bread and butter and eggs. Their dinner and supper generally consisted of moderate portions of rare roast beef or fowl or boiled trout, with an abundance of fresh vegetables and fruit. But cabbage, beans and peas were taboo.

The Emperor was very temperamental, and his family, even the Empress, did not always find it easy to get along with him. He was an autocrat to the very core, could not stand the slightest contradiction, and often treated his most tried and trusted attendants with great rudeness. We ascribed many of these unpleasant qualities to the influence that Prince Philip of Eulenburg exercised over His Majesty. The immediate superior of our kitchen staff was the Marshal of the Court. Every day the first chef had to submit the menus to him. They were then referred to the Empress for approval. She was especially particular with regard to the children's food. The Emperor's interest in these menus was of a very practical kind. He insisted that the table expenses should never exceed the amount allotted. On the other hand, he was most anxious that ambassadors accredited to his Court should be men of large private wealth, for though he was economical personally, he enjoyed being surrounded by lavish people.

Kaiser William was particularly fond of visiting the Krupp family, and often treated his most tried and trusted attendants with great rudeness. terested himself wholeheartedly in the family's affairs and gave Frau Krupp a salary of 100,000 marks when she was married. Later, when I was chef for Herr Krupp von Bohlen, I had numerous occasions to cook for His Majesty. In 1912 the hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the film was celebrated, and the Kaiser was invited to be present. In his honor a special reception hall was built in the great park surrounding the Villa, at a cost of 250,000 marks. Two weeks later, after the monarch had left, it was torn down again. In the will of the elder Krupp, whose death was suspected to have occurred by his own hand, William II. was remembered with a large bequest.

I will now give a few menus of dinners at the palace in Berlin, together with their cost. The first is a family dinner where only the royal couple and a few of their intimate friends and invited guests were present.

Berlin, February 3, 1902: (1) Dinner: Bouillabaisse, turbot with champagne; York ham with vegetables; pheasant with rice; roast venison; fruit; salads; artichokes with beef marrow; tips cake with pineapple; cheese sticks; dessert: besides three kinds of wine, including German champagne. We were allowed twelve marks a head for this menu, exclusive of wines, cigars, and flowers. (2) Supper: Baked seal with remoulade dressing; veal cutlets; Marengo; princess beans with fresh butter; apple fritters; dessert: fresh fruits; and two kinds of wine.

I will now give the menu of the formal dinner at the time the Emperor's uncle, King Edward of England, visited him.

Windsor soup; Rhine salmon a la Perigord; roast lamb a la Anglaise; chicken en gelée with salad; sauté of woodcock; fresh asparagus tips; pineapple a la royale; with four kinds of wine, including German champagne. One hundred and twenty guests attended this dinner, and the waiter wore liveries of the time of Frederick the Great. The cost of the wines was as follows: Chateau Lafite of 1870, thirty-eight marks a bottle; Tokay wine of 1853, thirty-five marks a bottle; St. Emilion of 1857, fifty marks a bottle; German champagne of 1904, twenty-four marks a bottle. The total cost of such a dinner ran from 10,000 to 12,000 marks.

Our busiest season in the palace kitchen began just after Christmas, with the New Year's reception, the anniversary of the Order of the Black Eagle, and the three annual court balls. At this time we engaged about a dozen assistant cooks at twenty marks a day and their board. In addition 170 or 200 men and six or eight non-commissioned officers were detailed from the Berlin garrison to assist us on the ball nights. Each of them received three marks, a bottle of wine and a free dinner.

Ordinarily from 850 to 900 invitations were issued to the balls, which began at half-past eight. Supper was served at half-past nine. There was a cold buffet at eleven and the affair ended at 1 a.m. Royalty and guests of a very highest rank, altogether about 250 people, were served in the White Salon. There were hundred and forty people served in the Queen's Salon and the Picture Gallery, and 260 in the Green Salon, its three anterooms, and the billiard room. The whole party of 1,000 people was seated at 1,000 tables. The supper menu on a ball night was turtle soup in cups, Rhine salmon with Bernese dressing, Brussels capon, California compote, salad, ice, Nesselrode pudding, cake and fruit. Four kinds of wine, cigars, and liqueurs completed the refreshments.

The cold buffet consisted of caviar; lobster mayonnaise; roudade of sole a la Alexander; shrimp a la Francaise; roast beef; roast veal escalote; roast venison Carven; three quails; roast chicken; roast pheasant; Colberg ham with Cumberland dressing; pate de fois gras and truffles; hazelnut ice-cream; cheese; fruit and dessert. Lackys and liver also served sandwiches, cakes and ice-cold drinks on silver servers.

The Emperor never danced. He stood with a little circle around him watching what was going on with the greatest interest. The duties of the floor-masters were very strenuous. He was generally a young officer from one of the guard regiments who was excused from military service during the whole court season.

Naturally, we used an enormous amount of provisions on ball days. For example, alone we required over 200 pounds of calves' knuckles, 100 pounds of beef knuckles, a huge sea turtle brought alive directly from London; ten large hens; and 150 pounds of beef bones. These cost in the neighborhood of 800 marks. For the fish course we used several hundred pounds of Rhine salmon at about five marks a pound, with imported new potatoes, which were exceedingly dear in the winter season. Altogether this course cost about 2,000 marks. Then we used 200 Brussels capons at twelve marks apiece, 150 cans of California fruit at two marks each, and 150 heads of Brussels cress at about 150 marks. The fresh fruit served included four-carrot apples at two marks each, 300 of the finest Duchesse pears at two marks each, 200 nectarines at one mark, 250 pounds of the finest Brussels grapes at nearly two marks a pound, and 125 pounds each of Brazil nuts, paper-shell almonds, and Malaga grapes at nearly a mark a pound, besides dates, figs, and other Southern fruits. So this item totaled about 3,000 marks.

At the cold buffet we used to serve twenty-four pounds of the best Russian capon, 250 pounds of lobster, three head of roast beef, three head of roast veal, ten boiled Colberg hams, about 250 pounds of shrimp, six head of venison, 200 quail, twenty duck, ten pheasants, and well toward 500 pounds of the choicest Emmentaler, Holland, Roquefort, Camembert and Gervais cheese. So that the total of this item was about 3,000 marks. The whole party of 1,000 people was seated at 1,000 tables. The supper menu on a ball night was turtle soup in cups, Rhine salmon with Bernese dressing, Brussels capon, California compote, salad, ice, Nesselrode pudding, cake and fruit. Four kinds of wine, cigars, and liqueurs completed the refreshments.

The cold buffet consisted of caviar; lobster mayonnaise; roudade of sole a la Alexander; shrimp a la Francaise; roast beef; roast veal escalote; roast venison Carven; three quails; roast chicken; roast pheasant; Colberg ham with Cumberland dressing; pate de fois gras and truffles; hazel-

Mightily have the times changed since then. We have no more court balls and no more royal dinners. And here we have, for the first time, the most powerful rulers of the earth now sit half-forgotten in his quiet villa far from the scene of his former glory.

British Churches To-day Are Closely Watching for Results From United Church of Canada

By REV. J. R. P. SCLATER, D.D.
St. Andrew's United Church, Toronto

Text: Psalm 127: 1. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

IF there is any text we have to remember at this great time in Canada—the text we have chosen to-night. With all the arrangements, readjustments and unification you like, the house we are building is not going to be much of a house by the time we have finished it, unless it is true that the Lord is building it with us.

SEEMING that I arrived only yesterday in Toronto from the Old Country, and was there on business as well as pleasure, I think that it is proper that I should give some brief account of the impressions left upon my mind as to the relations in which our enterprise stands to the Church of our fathers in the Old Land and to the Church of our brethren who are to work with us. I do so in no controversial spirit whatever. I simply want to state certain facts which are of general interest, which may possibly give comfort and a certain relief to some minds that are a little hesitant as to steps which have been taken.

On June 22 last the General Council of the Churches holding the Presbyterian system, through the initiative of the Scotch Church, met in Edinburgh, Scotland. No body could have entered the church in which those meetings were held without being impressed in an entirely new way with the world-wide significance of that section of the Church catholic to which we belong. I do not know how many different ecclesiastical organizations were represented—I should think forty, at the very least, but I do not know how many—but certainly a very large number of nations were represented, and in particular, nations which expressed a feeling of unity, of common fellowship, of common faith, of common hope, of common love, which only the other day were at each other's throats in war. It was something of comfort to find that men who, nationally, had been so bitterly opposed to each other, were already in obvious fellowship. There, after all, a communion which civil strife cannot defeat.

Among these there moved the very distinguished, the very gracious, the altogether charming figure of Dr. Merle d'Aubigny, the French Protestant leader, and a worthy representative of the splendid culture of France. If French Protestantism—French Presbyterianism—can produce many men so gracious, so competent, so obviously at peace, as that distinguished man, then in deed France has a witness in her own country to the power of the evangelical life, which she can ill afford to lose.

And then we found, coming with application for membership, a Church which represented only a few years further back a body of opinion more bitterly opposed to Britain than any, except possibly Irish opinion, for many a long day. There was applause in the Congress when the Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa—the Church, I suppose, of Kruger, General Botha and General Smuts—made a part of our family. Singular feelings were aroused when the representatives of one of the largest Presbyterian churches in the world—which used to be the Church of Hungary—appealed for our help in regard to injustices inflicted on them by the Rumanian Government. Our former enemies were appealing to our Presbyterian sympathies against their treatment by the Government of their own ally. So quickly does the wheel of this world's opinion change.

You could not be in that company—you could not see those men from Holland, from Germany, from Hungary, from India, from South Africa, from the homeland, from Canada and from all parts of the United States—you could not be in that company without feeling how wide was the significance of the Church which had its origin long ago in the strength of Geneva and had its power given to it by the magic energy of John Knox.

NOW, that council has certain power within its control. It has to consider any matters, any interests, of Presbyterianism in general, of Protestantism in general, of the Christian Church in general. And when they heard that in this great land there is the beginning of the healing of the wounds in a manner which does not separate us from our own ancestors, immediately they sprang from them that sudden, sharp, immediate, involuntary expression of thanksgiving. For, from Canada, there had come to them a word of hope.

Well, you see what that leads to. It means this, that the United Church being a part of the Presbyterian family, and I trust also being recognized as its representative in Canada by the Methodist Eccumenical Council and by the world-wide Congregational Alliance, forms a unique point for Britain—most significant, most important. If there is a land in all this world in which material and spiritual resources are being squandered, it is Britain at the present time. If there is a land in which the differences are socially unfortunate, it is England at the present time, and anything that can form a nodal point, even at a distance, which may react upon these divisions and bring them closer together is a reactive service to Great Britain of the greatest possible importance. And here they have got it. Here is a Church out in Canada, and the Methodists say, "that represents us"; and the Presbyterians say, "Admirable: for it is a member of our family: we have admitted it."

Now, it was upon that, in part, that here in this place determined our action, believing that we were not separating ourselves from that family of churches from which we ourselves have descended, nor from the dear Church of our fathers; and it was a comfort to find that among those experts, which comprised some of the chief Presbyterian historians and theologians of the world, there was not one single person who for one single second hesitated as to the admission of the United Church into the Presbyterian family. We are as much Presbyterian and part of the Presbyterian family as the Established Church of Scotland or the Free Church of Scotland, or the Irish Presbyterian Church, or any other Church that exists on the earth, and it is a very great comfort to us that that should be the case.

Another, when the United Church was submitted to the council, to those delegates representing the Presbyterian family, so put spread and far-flung throughout the world, there was a sudden outburst of unexpected applause. The names of other churches were read without any special demonstration, but when it came to this, "Communion there arose from all that body of people a sudden, sharp, and emphatic and clear burst of approbation. It is significant.

BRETHREN, men who are working in other countries and not least in Britain, are broken-down by Protestant division. They feel that if Protestantism remains in fragments, Protestantism has a poor future indeed. And when they heard that in this great land there is the beginning of the healing of the wounds in a manner which does not separate us from our own ancestors, immediately they sprang from them that sudden, sharp, immediate, involuntary expression of thanksgiving. For, from Canada, there had come to them a word of hope.

It is significant.

And gradually they may say, "If we are one yonder, why need we be separate here?"

You can see the inevitable reaction effect on the life of Britain. I do not think that sufficient importance has been given to the influence of our union movement in countries where divisions are possibly more marked, and where the effects are more serious, than they are in Canada. It is bound to be great; and the Old World will give thanks yet for this enterprise and adventure of the New.

From Cardiff I went to Edinburgh, and in the course of time, met many of the significant men in the two great Scottish Assemblies, and learned a great deal about the Scottish situation, and their assured determination to heal the divisions within Presbyterianism in Scotland, and that quickly, I also learned a great deal about their feeling towards us in Canada.

NOW, let me assure you that the feeling and the attitude is one of entire sympathy. They are concerned for the welfare of this Union Church; and while, of course, there is criticism of this and that detail, in general, with only one exception, all those with whom I talked accepted the fact that we have acted constitutionally and therefore continue to be what we were before. The constitutional Presbyterian argument for our continuity is accepted all but universally. We need not worry ourselves about "loss of lineage" any more. At the same time there are some matters the Scottish leaders are anxious about, and these I would like to speak of for a moment or two.

A STORY WITHOUT WORDS

NOW, here in Canada there is a union between Churches that are sentimentally and historically as close together as two Churches could be, namely, the Presbyterian Church and the Congregational Church. These Churches acted together, politically, and were extraordinarily similar in religious outlook and sentiment. With them there has come a third body, practically identical with ourselves in polity—for all my Methodist friends know quite well that they have been good Presbyterians from the beginning. That is why there was no difficulty at Cardiff. But, while there was no difference in polity, much hope of difference in sentiment. There was, for instance, a difference in our modes of expression in public worship. For our friends are children of the Church of England, and have retained forms of worship which prove themselves to be very much more than they seem to be. They will continue to use them, and even get back to them, if they have departed from them. For similar modes of expression in worship create a bond of union of the strongest kind; and if they retain the use of English forms, they will draw us nearer to Anglicanism, and not send us farther away. The Methodists in the United Church must hold to their history as strongly as we Presbyterians do. I hope that immigrants coming out to Canada will find congregations in the United Church where the forms are used that have been used in England. The whole point of union is that we believe that thereby it will be possible to be more effective for the Christianhood of Canada. The future is to display that, and to display it quickly.

THE whole Protestant world will watch Canada at the present time. It will watch the United Church of Canada—not to see whether it can show satisfactory balance sheets, but to see whether there is a new passion for the Kingdom of God throughout this Dominion, and whether this new Church is filled with a new energy; to see whether there is more power to the river to the great hills. If not, a heaviness will settle down on the watching spirits, and men will say, "Union is only a readjustment of agencies, after all. It is not worth men's pain and toil."

Wherefore there is a responsibility upon you, my friends. We have got to put our wills into the task—our wills and hearts and passion. There is an individual responsibility upon every member of Old St. Andrew's to dedicate themselves religiously anew; to put more patient energy into the work of the Church; to make it more a purpose of amendment; to pay new and nobler vows and to keep them. There is a responsibility, not only for this congregation, not only for this Church, but for all evangelical Christendom, laid upon every single individual, every member of the United Church.

Sometimes, when a man remembers that sudden, sharp applause at Cardiff, a chill fear makes grey the spirit. For those clapping hands were symbols of a hope that a new thing had come to the world—a new, living, potent thing, that was to advance the Kingdom of God. What if we should fail these brothers of ours—if through our slackness and base content, the expectation that union brings strength should be added to the long list of our failures? But that must not be. We must so work that we shall be builders with God in the city that is His own.

But two things they said: "Keep your strength; yes, each of the three branches now uniting, keep your strength; don't lose the best things you got from the past; contribute your strength and your weakness to a great United Church in order to do that, emphasize that which has made your own particular Church dear to you in the past; the old still solemnity of Presbyterian worship, the old suggestion of quiet reverence, the belief in the power of truth, once forced to its head, keep your strength." If we have faults we will be obliged to our friends for pointing them out in order to get rid of them, but for the moment we will emphasize and keep our strength.

Then, in the second place, they simply pointed to this text or its equivalent. What does union matter, anyway, or dis-union? What does it matter whether there is one Church in Canada, or 20,000, if none

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it cures them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any drugist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time. It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a natural and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes. Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FATTY ARBUCKLE COMES BACK, BUT HE HIDES HIS IDENTITY

By RUSSELL BIRDWELL

ROSCOE "Fatty" Arbuckle is laughing again. For a long time the round face of the one-time screen comedian was creased with a frown. He didn't have so very much to smile about. But now he's laughing—laughing perhaps over one of the most pitifully ironical happenings that Hollywood ever knew.

Arbuckle was chased from the screen four years ago by an outburst of righteous indignation following his tragic adventure at a New Year's Eve party in San Francisco. He could not get employment. The club women of the country, and the Will Hays clique in Hollywood, saw to that.

So last Winter, under an assumed name, Arbuckle became a director—and a mighty good one, too.

And here is where the irony comes in. Last year a committee of club women, co-operating with Will Hays' right-hand man, selected a list of fifty comedies which, because of their cheap, wholesome humor, were designated "the best to show school children." And the comedy that headed this list was one directed by Arbuckle—under his nom de plume.

Arbuckle has completely given up his old idea that some day he might be an actor again. His years of rebuffs and failure has taught him the hopelessness of that ambition. But now, for the first time since the San Francisco debacle, he doesn't care.

For Arbuckle, in the slang phrase, is "sitting on the world."

So successful have been the pictures which he has been directing that one of the largest studios here has just signed him to direct special productions for it—under the blanket of his assumed name, of course.

And Arbuckle, under this contract, is drawing $2000 a week. He lives in a palatial home in Beverly Hills, with two servants to make life easy for him. His wife—Doris Deane, movie actress, who married him last Spring—is devoted to him and he to her.

At the conclusion of his troubles in San Francisco—Arbuckle owed $182,000. He has paid $50,000 of this, and believes that the entire debt will be wiped out in three years more.

"I'm happy now," he says with a smile. "With my wife and my new work I have found happiness. And that is what I have been seeking for years."

The Shady Back Garden

By JOHN HUTCHISON, F.R.H.S.

This is not the first time that the writer felt constrained to write on this subject, but in view of the fact that no less than half a dozen people have inquired, during the past week, what to do with a shady garden, it is proposed to devote this article to that subject.

At the outset, let it be said that no kind of garden is harder to deal with, but at that, with a supply of patience a shady garden can be made a very beautiful thing.

Shady gardens generally suffer from other troubles besides lack of sunshine. The shade, particularly in towns and cities, is nearly always caused by buildings and these cause draughts. Cats also seem to frequent shady gardens more than those in the full sun. It is no wonder that some people give up the shady garden in disgust and surrender it to the cats and weeds.

As has been said, however, it is quite possible, with patience and perseverance, to make a garden in the shade. To begin with, don't try and have a lawn in a shady garden, that is a very shady garden, for no matter how carefully it is made and tended, it will soon become a moss-grown waste and a grassless eyesore. It is far better to be contented with beds and borders separated by gravel or brick or paved walks. It is not the idea in this article to discuss the laying out of the garden in the shade but rather to point out the things that will grow in such a situation.

USE OF FERNS
Almost always, the only things

found in the shadiest part of the shady garden are ferns. This is quite all right if one will only get a variety of ferns. There are dozens of varieties of quite hardy ferns which can well be used for the purpose of garden decoration. The native Maidenhair is one of the hardiest and most beautiful of all the ferns. Then, too, there are the hart's tongue, the lady fern, and many kinds of the male fern, which are quite easy and cheap to get and which will add variety to the fern bed. Combined with the ferns, the butcher's broom (Ruscus aculeatus) may be grown. This plant is scarce on this coast but it would be more grown if it were better known.

Hypericum calycinum, a very common plant with very yellow flowers, is well worth growing, provided it is watched carefully and not allowed its own sweet will in the matter of spreading all over creation. The same may be said of the periwinkle (Viola). There are several kinds of these—some large and some small with either blue or white flowers.

If there is a shady wall, try Crataegus pyracantha, which will produce red berries in Winter and is a good evergreen. This is not a fast growing shrub but it is quite one of the best things for shade.

THE JASMINES
There are three Jasmynes that will grow in the shade. Jasmine officinalis, rather a slender grower which is better for support of some kind, has white flowers and glossy foliage.

age; Jasmine nudiflorum, a twiggy and erect shrub with yellow flowers in Winter or very early Spring, and Jasmine revolutum or humble, the Italian yellow Jasmine. The last-named does not do as well in the shade as in sun, but will still give a good account of itself.

Ivy is too much used in shady situations. It is too mournful and is a splendid harbor for slugs. However, it will grow and do its best in shade, and if it is given it is well to get some of the choicer varieties.

CARE OF SOIL

There are many plants that will thrive in a "sunless" or almost sunless border. If they are given a proper chance. The soil in the shade is often dank and sour. If this is the case it should be thoroughly well dug and dressed with lime or basic slag and if it is heavy a quantity of sand should be added to it to lighten its texture.

Foxgloves will do well in full shade, you plant Foxgloves try the new Shirley strain and you will have something that will delight you in the way of coloring. The tall sorts of Solomon's Seal, Thalictrum aquilegifolium (meadow rue) and Golden Rod (Senecio) are among the taller growing subjects which will be found to do well.

MORE PLANTS FOR SHADE

Among those plants which are not so tall-growing we have Japanese anemones, in shades of pink and also white, Spiraea palmata and Spiraea filipendula, pink and white; Trollius europaeus, yellow; Funkia Sieboldii, Epimedium pinnatum, a native of the shady woods of Persia, with white flowers and which generally holds its foliage all Winter, and Cardamine pratensis (the double lady's smock). The two last-named plants make a fairly heavy and damp situation. There are a few of the campanulids that will stand shade but most of them object to dead shade. Campanula latifolia does not offer any particular objection to shade, and Campanula alliarifolia, if you can get it, likes it. Campanula latifolia objects strongly to lime in the soil in which it grows.

For an edging in the shade there is nothing better than the old London Pride (Saxifraga Umbrosa). This plant will stand anything except a prolonged drought. Another good edging plant for the same situation is the common woodruff (Asperula odorata), and in the mass, its little sweet scented white flowers are very attractive.

SHADY ROCK GARDEN

A rock garden may be managed in the shade, but only suitable subjects should be chosen. Among these are the little creeping Jenny (Lysimachia Nummularia), Mosses—Saxifraga will grow and increase but will not flower so well as where they have some sun. Arenaria balearica will grow to perfection in dead shade and makes the best carpeting plant for such a situation. A hardy little sub-shrub, the yellow flowers all through the summer—is Chrysosplenium virginicum. All it asks is to be well watered in dry weather. Raymondia pyramidalis is a treasure for a shady rock garden if it is planted in a cranny between rocks. The Welsh Poppy (Meconopsis cambrica), will grow well but will not need itself so freely in shade as it does in the sun. There is an orange-colored form of this which is much better than the type.

The hardy cyclamen, particularly Cyclamen Neapolitanum, Anemone hepatica and Anemone sylvestris, Leucum vernum and Leucum aestivum are among the bulbous plants which will answer in a shady garden.

DAFFODILS IN SHADE

Many of the daffodils will do well in shade and it is a good plan to plant a few every year and, when they have been in the shade for two or three years, to move them into a more sunny position, replacing them with others. By this means one may keep them going well at all times. A shady garden needs some attention on ground more exposed to the sun. The very fact of its being so healthy, liverwort, moss and other unpleasant things, particularly if at all damp. It is, therefore, most necessary that the ground should be gone over at frequent intervals with a garden fork to keep the soil loose and stirred. A watch, too, should be kept for slugs and other pests both creeping and flying, as these, like most bad things are not anxious for a place in the sun.

Shore, Field and Woodland

NATURE NOTES

By ROBERT CONNELL

EARLY BLOOMING INDIVIDUAL PLANTS

While there is a general average season of flowering in a species, every gardener knows that there are forward individuals which outstrip their comrades and others which lag curiously behind. That earliness or lateness of this kind are not due to special advantages or disadvantages of position is plain, for such plants are no differently placed than their neighbors. It is, in fact, an instance of the individuality of plants. Growers take advantage of the earliness to develop strains in which the exception becomes the rule; so in the case of what the northern limit of growth bends towards the Mackenzie River. On the lower slopes of Mount Macdonald in the Goldstream district I saw an example the other day. The manzanita, one of our large heaths, occurs there in scattered bushes, its pale dull green foliage mingling with the glossy leaves of

WEALTH NO HANDICAP TO THESE SONS OF THREE MILLIONAIRES

Edward A. Cudahy

By ROY J. GIBBONS

If your father were a multi-millionaire, would you work? Perhaps you would and perhaps you wouldn't. In the story books, you know, the rich man's son is always pictured as a playboy, trooping along the primrose path until he stumbles his toe on a bit of unearned increment and gets laid up.

And there's the old saying about it being only three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves. The poor boy is generally supposed to have more willingness to work than the rich boy.

But in Chicago are three men who upset this tradition completely. Their fathers are enormously wealthy. But these three men, before they had reached their twenties, were working at the severest kind of labor, putting in long hours and acting just as if they hadn't a cent in the world.

As a result, each one has succeeded his father as head of a monster industry. The concerns headed by these three men represent total investments of around $100,000,000. And each is president because he began at the bottom and worked his way up—just as any other man would do.

under the control of the peculiar individual property we call "life."

THE SHORE IN WINTER
Along the sea-shore at this time of the year there is plenty of activity, but it differs from that of Summer. Now there is, for example, the regular rhythmic swing of the saw, for the harvest of the sea about Victoria is largely composed of timber cut up by the high tides or by the great seas after gales. Many of these logs must have spent long months in the water and have suffered much buffeting by the waves to judge by their torn and splintered sides. Those who cut them say that one great hardship is the presence of small stones which have been driven into the wood by the violence of the sea. Many of them are veritable giants. But there is also a rich supply of smaller stuff for weaker arms, and every beach shows women and children gathering it for the domestic hearth. Occasionally, but indeed very rarely, you may come upon someone gathering shell fish. All this is in contrast to the Summer scenes when many practical activities are

FROST FLOWERS BY THE WAY
But while the manzanita sheds its beauty on the hillside air there are other blossoms on the road below. The great cliffs of Humpback Hill hide the sun from the valley until just noon in these Winter days, so that while the southeast-facing side of Mount Macdonald is basking in warm sunshine down below all is in the shade. Last night's frost has left its traces not only in the ice on the roadside "fences" in the wet soil. Yet they are not iceicles, for their mode of growth is different. Iceicles grow by accretion and are like the stalactites which line the inside of limestone caves and which have their reversed form in the stalagmites which are built up from the floor by the drippings from above. These are all quite other than the little tufted ice-forms by the road. In their case what seems to happen is something like this: The water in the saturated soil freezes and, as it freezes, expands and rises. As it ascends between the particles of soil and tiny fragments of stone its place is taken by fresh supplies of water from below. Thus the water may be conceived of as rising slowly in a column.

the upper layer of soil. The viscosity of the ice in the little columns, that is, its ability to flow under pressure, is well shown, the pressure in this case coming partly from the rising water and partly from the force of gravity. Thus the columns bend and their lower ends are generally marked by vertical lines on the outside, such as the striations often seen on the faces of the crystals in rocks. While their development is due to what we call mechanical forces they suggest a kinship to the plants in which these forces pass

WRIGLEY BEGAN EARLY

Phillip K. Wrigley, son of William Wrigley, the chewing gum king, is just thirty-one. Had he chosen he could have been a playboy. But instead he is among the first to the office each morning.

About a year ago the elder Wrigley stepped out of the president's chair and young Wrigley took his place to direct the $100,000,000 business.

"He did it on merit or he wouldn't have got it," Pa Wrigley said afterward.

John R. Thompson, Jr., and Edward Cudahy, Jr., are the other two sons of rich men who have made good.

Both have succeeded their fathers as presidents of large corporations. And as in Wrigley's instance, the fathers have stepped out to become chairmen of the board of directors. Thompson, Jr., heads the Thompson chain of restaurants which stretch from coast to coast.

When he graduated from Yale in 1917 he went to work in one of his father's restaurants as a dishwasher to learn the business from the bottom up. He worked from twelve to fourteen hours a day at the start. Cudahy heads the Cudahy Packing Company, one of the world's largest meat packing companies. He started at the bottom in his dad's firm at nineteen and rose from the ranks.

All three are married and have children. Thompson is just thirty-one, while Cudahy is forty-two.

"ALL DEPENDS ON THE MAN"
"I can't see where having nothing or millions goes against a fellow's making good," said Wrigley. "It all depends on the man. As far as I'm concerned I made up my mind that if my dad could make it I could make mine."

"There's work to be done and everybody ought to pitch in and help and that's what I'm trying to do."

"I believe in my father's maxim," says young Thompson Jr.

"Dad founded his business on the ideal of truth. Without truth nothing can last nor succeed. And no man, rich or poor, will get very far unless he makes truth his watchword and is true especially to himself."

What these three sons of rich men have done reverses the usual Horatio Alger plot which has Ragged Dick for its hero.

Each started from the bottom and was satisfied to progress on merit. With golden spoons or patches, they rise to the front in this day and age.

TRANSVAAL SETTING
Again the scene is the Transvaal, but now the South African blacks are off-stage figures, rather than principals.

In the new novel the struggle surrounds Mary Adams, who would acquire social status at any cost. This she thinks she achieves through her wedding to Elliot Glenn, an Englishman of good family and fine physique.

Glenn may have manners but he has no money. Van Aardt is rough but with the off-mentioned diamond basis. These four are jangled about in situations tragic, wistful and ironic.

SIMPLICITY IN STYLE
Again Miss Millan shows what can be done with a style of utmost simplicity. A study of the power that lies in such simplicity should be made by many of our "high-fluting" writers. Fannie Hurst, for instance, might learn how she could have turned "Appassionata" into a memorable volume.

DAN is fast becoming one of the favorite background figures of good and bad stars. His symbol may be found in "The Goat Song," a new drama just arrived and again in Stephen McKenna's "The Oldest God."

This McKenna has been growing rapidly over a period of years. He has now cast Pan into a more suitable role. Pan does not dance down the green in the moonlight. He turns the scene into a scene of drunkenness, violence and abandon. All the secret desires and passions of the guests break forth, with the arrival of one Puncel, Endicott and a mysterious friend, "Mr. Stranger." The guests had just been arguing natural instincts as against conventional behavior when "Mr. Stranger" arrived.

At the end there is scandal, chaos and disaster as the revelers rub their eyes and wonder how it all came about. In this quite brilliant tale it seems to us that there is something more subtle than a mere sermon.

WHEN IT COMES TO FISH STORIES THE LOWLY CLAM'S NO DUMDORA

CONSIDER the clam. And if you would consider it exhaustively and impartially, consult with Ivory Kilborn, the undisputed clam king of his stretch of coastline.

Fifteen years and more he has clamped in a little shack on the banks of the shore, earning from clams a comfortable livelihood—and learning from them things a lot of folks undoubtedly don't know.

"The clam," observes Ivory, "is a much abused citizen. 'People don't understand 'em. 'At's why."

There's the common impression, for instance, that the clam is just about the ultimate in dumdbors.

DUMB? HA, HA, HA!
"Dumb? Clams? Listen!" snorts Ivory.

"Rats pestered me nearly to death when I first came here. Big fellows 'at rummaged through my shell heaps and even gnawed holes in th' floor."

"Clams hate rats. Don't ask me why I dunno. But they do."

"So one day after I got through shucking, I sprinkled a trail of shells from my house to th' flats down there."

"Wa! sir, just as I hoped, th' rats followed the shell game down to th' flats at low water."

"I was watchin' from behind that tall marsh grass down on th' bank. 'What happened?'"

"Well, in reach, some big husky clam grabbed it!"

"You order heard th' rats holler! 'It sounded like drivin' rivets" when the clams shells began to clump down."

"And when th' tide come up, it was th' rats, not th' clams, 'at was dumb from then on."

There's another funny thing about a clam, too.

"How far," questions Ivory, "do you suppose a clam can stretch his neck?"

"Wa! sir, any clam 'at's out of knee pants can run 'at old black head of his out of th' shell a full three inches, an' 'ere's one place up th' river where they'll get twice that."

SILENCE IS GOLDEN

HAD PIMPLES A WHOLE SUMMER

On Face and Neck. Lost Rest. Cuticura Healed.

"I had a breaking out of little red pimples on my face and neck. The pimples festered and scalded over causing disfigurement. They itched and burned causing me to scratch, and the scratching caused eruptions. The irritation caused a lot of discomfort, and I lost my rest at night. I had the trouble a whole summer."

"I was treated without success. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some, and after using one box of Cuticura Soap and two cakes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Forest Krick, R. R. 4, Rockford, Ohio.

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO CHILDREN

Wide Range of Subjects Is Chosen By Entrants In Book Lovers' Contest Now Closed

Treasure Island a Firm Favorite, With Dickens, Thackeray, and Many Standard Authors Well Liked

Owing to the great number of replies received in the Book-Lovers Contest, only a bare synopsis of some of the best of the replies can be given in this issue. Occasion may be found later to refer to some of the other entries, or to quote in part from the best received. Below will be found a summary taken from a selection made at random from the well-filled postbag received in this competition.

FOND OF DICKENS

"I think Dickens is the best and cleverest author of the books I have read," says May Moore, a thirteen-year-old reader, of 3249 Quadra Street. "He describes life as it then was very vividly children lured out of their homes at night and who, after several excursions, tell their parents of the escape and promise never to be foolish again and to disobey the wishes of their guardians.

LIKES ADVENTURE

Treasure Island, R. L. Stevenson; The Gorilla Hunters, Bullantyne; Rolf in the Woods, Seton; and many other books of adventure appeal to George Beveridge, a twelve-year-old reader at 1323 Monterey Avenue. After describing his favorite stories, this entrant closes with the following thought, which will be shared by all who are fond of reading: "All these books have been good companions to me, especially when confined to bed and sickness, and on wintry evenings—truly, books are silent friends."

SCHOOL STORIES, PLEASE

"The books I like best are the stories about girls at boarding school," writes Roberta Bonstow, 914 Hillside Avenue. "There is always something exciting in them, yet they always teach you something without being 'dry.' I like 'A Bunch of Cherries' by Mrs. Meade—the girls in the story are about our age and we seem able to think and sympathize with them. Therefore these are my favorite books."

LIKES TRAVEL STORIES

"My favorite books are those on travel and exploring," says Jane Cressor, 1675 Fell Street. "When I read books on travel I like them to take me to different parts of the world—it is very interesting to learn how foreign peoples live, and of their customs. I think the world of sea captains, who are quiet and modest heroes and have all the lives of those on board in their keeping. That is why I like 'The Cruise of the Albatross' by Mrs. Meade. It is a very quiet and peaceful story, except at meals. If people cannot go traveling, then I say let them sit down before a roaring fire and take a book telling them of the beauties of the world and then they will not need any money to go traveling."

TEACHES OBEDIENCE

Irene Rhodex, 1325 Cook Street, places "The Girls of the Woods" as her favorite story, and describes the book very well, drawing the useful moral that disobedience does not pay in the end. The story is one of

Jack Daw's Adventures

Story by Hal Cochran Drawings by L. W. Redner

In Cannibal Land—Chapter 5

Jack then turned to loading the rowboat, while the cannibal king hopped back into his canoe and paddled out to where he had left the other canoes. Shortly there was a loud cheer from all of the canoes. And, looking up, Jack saw all the cannibals waving their spears. He wondered what it was all about.

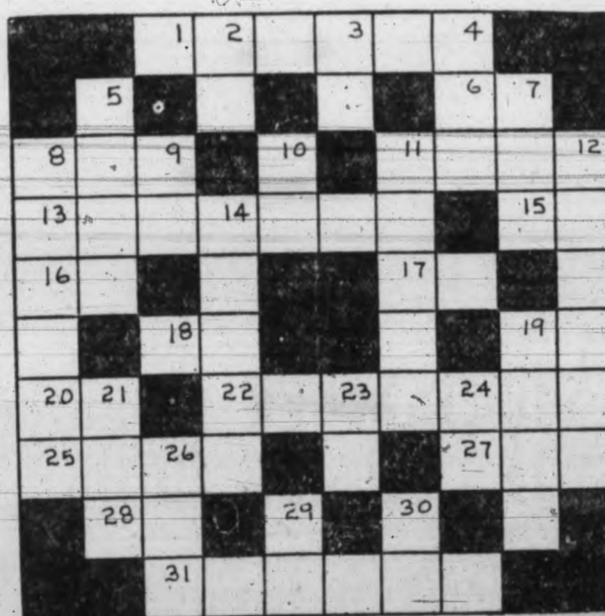

Then the voice of the ruler explained the sudden outburst. "I have told my people about the rescue," he shouted, "and they are all glad you and Dotty are to visit us." "Thanks very much," shouted Dotty in reply. And then she started to load the provisions.

Everything was ready for the start when Jack heard a low growl. Dotty also heard it and rushed to Jack's side. "What was that?" she whispered. And Jack, in reply, pointed down along the shore of the island. Dotty stared, very much frightened, at a large lion which was crouched about fifty feet away. (Continued.)

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

Here is puzzle No. 121, and the answer to that published last week. Definitions for each word to be found are under either the vertical or horizontal columns below. A numbered square is the beginning of a word. When the number is under a black square it commences a vertical word. When the number is to the right of a black square on its own line it will be the first of a horizontal word. Do not stay too long over any word. Pass along to the next and perhaps the correct word will suggest itself to you later as the squares become more filled in. Save the puzzle patterns for your next indoor party.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily and the Pink Cat

Copyright, 1925, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Standing on the mantle shelf in the front room of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow was a pink cat. Never did the cat lay down or curl up—always it sat there—upright and stiff, staring straight ahead with yellow eyes.

And the reason the pink cat never curled up or stretched out comfortably as other cats do, was because this pink one was made of china. Yes, it was a china cat! Uncle Wiggily had seen it in the window of the eight and nine cent store one day and had bought it for a mantle ornament for his new rabbit lady wife.

"I think the pink cat is very sweet," said Mrs. Longears when Uncle Wiggily first brought it home, and she thought the same thing day after day, and it was now almost a year old, was the china cat.

One day, just before Uncle Wiggily started out to look for an adventure, and when Mrs. Uncle Wiggily was putting on her hat to go down town shopping, Mrs. Longears Wiggily, whooping, called her housekeeper, crept into the front room to dust the mantle. She was about to lift the china cat aside to wipe beneath it when, all of a sudden, the pink cat moved to the far end of the mantle, almost falling off.

"Oh, my goodness!" squeaked Mrs. Longears Wiggily. "What is the matter?" cried Uncle Wiggily, hopping into the room very much excited. "Did the pink cat try to jump in the window, Nurse Jane?"

"No, but the pink china cat—it moved—like it moved away as I was going to pick it up to dust beneath it!"

"Nonsense, Janie!" exclaimed Mrs. Longears. "That pink china cat isn't alive—it is like a plate on the table—it can't move of itself."

"Can't it?" squeaked Nurse Jane. "Just look here!"

She stretched one paw toward the pink china cat and, surely enough, the mantle ornament moved over to the other end of the shelf.

"See!" whispered the muskrat lady.

"Ha! Ha! I fooled you, didn't I?" laughed Jollie. "I jumped up on the mantle with my sister Jiffie and she tipped up the pink china cat so I could get inside the hollow part. There was a little hole where I could look out and when I saw Nurse Jane coming I pattered my feet and made the cat move. I fooled you, didn't I?"

"Yes, you did," said Uncle Wiggily. "but you mustn't do it again, Jollie. You might have frightened Nurse Jane."

"Oh, no!" laughed the muskrat lady housekeeper. "I was only pulling. I was afraid the pink china cat might be getting to dislike me."

Their parents' homes adjoin in Hollywood, and Tim is telling Suzanne how he appeared with his father in a recent picture. But Suzanne isn't thrilled, because she intends to be a dancer.

Where Miners Wear Feathers And Breakfasts Fall From Above Into Many Eager Mouths

Sappers of the Bird World Tunnel Boldly and Well in Nesting Time

Roaming with pleasant murmurings through the sunlight and shade of forest glades, a stream of crystal-clear mountain water made its way down to the rich valley lands below. Where it passed through the foothills the stream had worn a steep path for itself through sandy soil, leaving soft banks rising to a height of ten feet, or more, on either side.

At this portion of its course the stream flowed along almost hidden from view, with many quiet chuckles to itself at having thus easily evaded observation. Only on approaching its banks could a passerby become aware of the water slipping past between the banks, to emerge later from under a cluster of willows in the valley below.

At one side of the stream in the cutting the bank rose to a height of about ten feet, where the water had worn down the bed of its course through successive years of Spring freshets and melting snows. A glance at the bank at this point showed a number of tunnels bored in its face, with openings about as big as an apple, and giving the impression of considerable depth.

At two places in the bank these borings showed signs of activity, as a fall of loose soil was trickling down from the opening of the tunnels and making a spatter like rain on the water.

In the stream itself at both these points trout gathered to watch wide-eyed what took place. They knew from experience that often in the fall of the clay a worm or two might be expected to pitch heading into the water, a welcome form of break-lust from the clear blue sky.

A casual watcher would have put the trickling soil down to the activity of rats—or some other four-footed creature scratching in the borings. He would have been much surprised to learn the real cause of the disturbance was a bird.

Pausing to clean the accumulation of dirt behind him, a kingfisher looked his way to the opening of one of the tunnels and pushed the loose earth into the stream with feet, wing-tips and beak. When the passageway was again clear he returned to his digging and for awhile was lost to view from the banks of the stream.

When the bird was clearing the mouth of the tunnel the trout did a brisk business, for the river bank was a mixture of sandy soil in which a number of worms and grubs were working made their home. There were breakfasts for all and indeed, some of the fish satisfied themselves on that score many times over and retired to a quieter part of the stream to rest.

For fear of interruption, cold, or some other reason, the kingfisher pushed the tunnel along to a prodigious depth in the side of the bank. One, two and three feet of boring slipped away behind as day followed day. Seldom did the bird rest, save for food and a fleeting drink from the stream.

At the end of the boring, which was over four feet in length, the kingfisher hollowed out a sizable chamber in the moist soil. This was to be his home, and that of his mate. In a few weeks time they would get busy about their housekeeping and about the time the Spring air became pleasantly warm, out from the tunnel would come their chicks, baby because I am a rat. But it's all right now. Then she picked up the pink ornament and the china cat never moved at all, not even to blink its yellow eyes, for Jollie, the mouse boy, was no longer inside.

So was solved the mystery of the pink china cat. And if the blotter didn't take the ink out of the fountain pen to make lemonade for the lead pencil, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Mr. Whitewash.

CONTEST WINNERS

Prizewinners in the Book-Lovers Contest, which closed on February 15, are as follows: May Moore, 2249 Quadra Street, Victoria, B.C., first prize, $2. Gerald F. Prevost, care H. F. Prevost, Duncan, B.C., second prize, $2. Jane Cressor, 1675 Fell Street, Victoria, B.C., third prize, $1. Letters have been sent to the prizewinners in advance of this publication and in case of any delay in their arrival prizewinners are asked to notify the Children's Editor, The Times, at once.

kingfishers with drab coats and quaint, inquisitor-looking heads.

While the trout in the stream benefited from the digging of the kingfisher's tunnel, the birds were glad of the trout in the stream. Sitting on an overhanging branch a kingfisher would dart suddenly, fold his wings and drop like a plummet to the water. Almost before the eye could see he would have thrust in his long beak and withdrawn a troutling from the water. Sometimes the dive was a failure, and on such occasions the bird would remain its place on the branch with such a scolding that other birds in the neighborhood would become still to listen.

So it was that the stream gave life and food to many of nature's creatures in this quiet section of its course. Kingfishers were not alone in the use of its sandy banks to tunnel in. Other little miners were there, too, though by mutual arrangement each class kept much to itself and interfered as little as possible with its neighbor.

True, a rat might make an occasional foray down the tunnel of a kingfisher's home at night, but he would be met at the end of his quest by a pair of bright beady eyes, and face a danger-like beast which would be sure to guard the passage. There may have been occasions on which the birds were caught asleep, but then, too, many a rat retreated with wounds that he would remember for many a day to come.

Apart from the pillars, which live in the wilds, the stream and its transient population saw a peaceful existence, and in the Spring months of the year would hear, busy as they were, the voices of the birds who lived in the water, or roosted in burrows in its banks and in the neighboring trees.

JOSEPH TESTS HIS BROTHERN

JOSEPH commanded his steward to fill the men's sacks with food and to put his silver cup into Benjamin's. After they had left the city to overtake them and open every sack, when the cup was found in Benjamin's to bring them back to him. Joseph said, "What deed is this that you have done. The man in whose hand the cup is found shall be my servant." Then Judah begged that he might serve in Benjamin's stead; he said his father was old and loved Benjamin, if they did not return with him their father would die.

HOME INTERESTS AND ACTIVITIES

Late Princess Had Passion For Buying Silk Stockings; 1,200 Pairs

Princess Alice of Monaco Had Extravagant Wardrobe and Wonderful Collection of Jewels; Bequest to Maid.

London, Feb. 20.—Buying silk stockings was a passion of the late Princess Alice of Monaco, and it is expected that over 1,200 pairs will be found among her effects.

Boots and shoes also fascinated her, and there are nearly 100 pairs—some of which have never been worn. She also possessed over sixty woolen and silken jumpers of all colors.

Surprises are expected when the will of the princess, who was the wife of Prince Albert of Monaco, from whom she obtained a judicial separation in 1902, is published shortly.

A wonderful collection of pearls and precious stones and a quantity of valuable furs are among the bequests to relatives, although some of the Princess's property has not been assigned to anybody.

BEQUEST FOR MAID

One of the beneficiaries is Miss Cynthia Miller, the Princess's personal maid, who had been with her for twenty years. She was left £1,000 in francs, but she will not get anything like this sum.

The Princess was passionately fond of Pekingese dogs and she had three—Ming, Chang and Hooy. These she bequeathed to Miss Miller with the strictest injunction that they should be well cared for and not given away. With them was a bequest of £200. But here again Miss Miller was very unlucky.

Miss Miller in an interview in London, said that it was the intention of the Princess to allow her £200 a year for tending the dogs, and in a former will this was made clear.

But in the later will the Princess omitted to insert the "per annum" and all the faithful maid will get £200.

When in London the Princess lived at Claridge's, where she had a permanent suite. This contains her own furniture, most of which is old and extremely valuable.

PHILANDERINGS

ONE must look in lowly places, now-a-days, for a device. Indeed, a little shifting of monograms and devices make that sly variety which lends to life its ineffable charm where women are concerned.

The popular device belongs upon the slipper, or upon the boot, since these latter are in vogue. A little circle of gold or silver, or even of jewels, with the monogram, or device, should the fair one possess one which she would tell.

Possibly the encircled initials will be more popular than any motto, however, intriguing it might be.

KNITTED tissues have been somewhat discarded these last few months, and no wonder. What woman has not been in despair over the irritating way that these garments deform themselves?

However, the mode was chic and comfortable, and now here is the resourceful dressmaker to the rescue. A new knitted material has been invented which will not stretch itself out of all proportion, and every one will welcome it with joy.

Poetry even in the fabrication of a knitted jersey, for we are told that the finest cashmeres of India and softest wools of Angora combine harmoniously in the making.

THE vogue of black is confirmed more and more. Every woman knows what a distinguished picture she makes in a well-made black gown, but of late the mode demanded brilliant colors and flaming pictures.

It may be that some women adopt black as being inconspicuous, and in that case she was disappointed, for a woman in black is a most compelling lovely figure standing out from all the others.

It is to be hoped, however, that the mode will not insist too drastically upon black, for if you recall a few seasons ago, everyone wore black, and the ordinary drawing-room full of pretty women resembled nothing so much as a crowded funeral.

It is not impossible that the new sombre effects in the way of raiment will tend to enhance the conversation, and judging from fragments which float to one's ears in the course of an evening, the gentle art will be quite sufficient to lend color enough to any assemblage.

HOW we have been impressed by Mustapha Kemal Pasha's new high hat! What a marvelous thing to visualize Angora with all the leading citizens in toppers!

But still more interesting will be the sight of the Turkish ladies all decked out in the latest headgear from Paris! Accustomed as they have been to the yashmak, one quite naturally predicts a revolution in Turkey some day soon.

QUAINT CURES FOR "SICK" JEWELRY

Late Queen's Pearls Placed at Bottom of Sea to Restore Lustre

The late Queen Mother of Italy possessed a remarkable collection of jewels, and her death has recalled the story of how one of her chief treasures, a wonderful rope of pearls, went "sick," losing both color and lustre, and was restored by being placed in a perforated basket and deposited for some months at the bottom of the sea.

Though, naturally, the proceeding attracted unusual interest, these pearls were by no means the only ones that have been restored to health by a temporary return to their native element.

Many precious stones are occasionally subject to mysterious ailments which detract from their beauty and value; the worst sufferers are pearls, rubies and diamonds, though opals, turquoises, emeralds and sapphires are also liable to "sickness."

With sick pearls an alternative to the deep-sea cure is an operation. The discolored outer skin is softened by various processes and then removed by an expert jewel surgeon, exposing the clear, fresh layer beneath.

RUBIES MASSAGED

Rubies that lose brilliancy are treated by cleaning, massage and dyeing. Diamonds, the most frequent sufferers of all, are doctored in a similar way, and a course of dye baths may bring about a perfect cure.

The commonest diamond ailment, however, and the worst, is yellowing, which causes a heavy slump in value, and can seldom be overcome except by faking. By skilful processes of dyeing the objectionable yellow tint can be changed to blue, or even entirely removed—but only for a time.

The strangest of jewel cures is also the simplest. Certain human temperaments or skins—no one can say which—have a stimulating effect upon precious stones, and merely by wearing sick jewels for a short period some women can restore them to health and beauty.

Enamelled pans can be thoroughly cleaned by scouring with crushed eggshells and soapy water.

Frying pans should not be washed but cleansed with plenty of soft paper before they are quite cold.

After separating the stalks of a head of celery and washing them, stand them in a jug of cold water to which has been added a small quantity of salt. This helps to make the celery crisp.

SEATTLE GIRL ARTIST LANDS IN BEAUTY CHORUS IN QUEST FOR ART TYPES

Beatrice Blinn, young Seattle artist, who joined the chorus of "Gay Paree" in order to paint chorus girls and (below) Leona Hogarth, who plays the leading feminine role in Eugene O'Neill's new play, "The Great God Brown."

HAROUNEL Raschid, according to the ancient tale, went about his kingdom in disguise that he might study his people at close range. And Beatrice Blinn, talented young artist, has taken on the disguise of a chorus girl that she may find the proper models for future paintings.

Broadway is full of chorus girls who became artists. But to date Miss Blinn is the first artist to win her place as a chorus girl. Six months ago Beatrice Blinn was living at home in Seattle. What's more, she was about to be married.

Artists have a way of picking up "queer types" for their work, and she was no exception. She had won some little attention in art circles, and has an honorable mention or two from the Northwest Art Exhibit. Her hubby-to-be wasn't particularly keen about the "bizarre creatures" she used for models.

The old question of "love or career" bobbed up—and then Beatrice came by accident upon a book. It was Marion Spitzer's "Who Would Be Free?"

CAME TO NEW YORK

Beatrice was in the mood for some arguments on "freedom" and finding them, up and went to New York. The first person she sought out was Miss Spitzer.

Miss Spitzer introduced her to many people in the theatre and writing world. Miss Blinn painted Pavlova in her snow costume, and Mary Nash and other stage celebrities. But she wanted types. And so she became a chorus girl.

To-day she is dancing in "Gay Paree" and has sketched three or four of the chorine types in preparation for future exhibit.

New Handkerchief Fad Started by Parisians

Paris, Feb. 20.—A handkerchief matching the gown is the feature of the new dress, showings of which there have been a half dozen every day this season.

From the first result of these showings, launched by several prominent couturiers, it is believed that the handkerchief will become a fad and the maid of 1926 will make it as effective in country as was the large fan of Madrid or the tiny tilted parasol of the second empire.

Because of this new fashion, all young ladies of to-day are expected to take lessons in the subtle code of the handkerchief. No doubt, if the fad develops a new sign language or at least a flirtation language will be devised. Already there are certain allowances and requirements for its use.

To remove soot from a chimney without making dirt, put a few red cinders on a shovel and sprinkle three-pennyworth of ground saltpetre over them. Before the fire is lighted hold the shovel as high as possible up the chimney till the fumes are exhausted.

IS THIS THE HIGHER EDUCATION?

Student Says Many Universities Are Only Varnishing Plants

"Thomas W. Duncan" has aroused much comment recently by writing for his college paper, a biting criticism of university life. To show that "Mr. Duncan" is not a student who has been soured by being left out of those college activities that he criticizes, the following excerpt from a letter from him is printed:

"This story is not written by an outsider looking in; rather, by an insider looking out. For, I have been connected with the radical group, also with four fraternities—one of them a local social, one a local dramatic, and two national professionals. This is not a sour-grapes attack!"

"I have represented my college on the varsity debating squad. I have served as editor for over a year. I have known 4 o'clock dates, hot dances, etc. In other words, I am just the ordinary college student."

By THOMAS W. DUNCAN

IF William Shakespeare were a student in a modern college he would be politely snubbed. If Shelley were to enroll to-morrow at any one of our western universities, every fraternity would pass him up as "queer."

Lord Byron would be booted from the campus before a week had passed, and I doubt very much if Swift or Voltaire would be allowed to attend. The so-called "ideal college student" of to-day must not be unusual or extraordinary if he expects to remain in the favor of his fellow students. He must be ordinary to the nth degree; he must be excruciatingly normal. Indeed, if he is just a trifle subnormal he is much more likely to "make" a good fraternity.

He must believe implicitly that the varsity football squad is composed of young gods, that the half-baked opinions of his instructors are final, that the "ole school spirit" is "great stuff," and, above all, that his fraternity, his group, his university are above criticism.

The university of to-day is an immense varnishing works where one learns to dance, play bridge and poker, carry a load of alcohol gracefully, and, incidentally, to invent clever excuses for undone work. It is a convenient place to which John and Mary may go from in order to have their rough edges and sharp corners smoothed down and sand-papered.

John dons a pair of wide pants, a checkered necktie, and becomes a "collegiate." Mary learns from the "actives" the preferred "line" of her sorority, the proper fork to use, the technique of a moonlight date, and her education is complete.

WHEN SHE "PETS" If her sorority "pets" she "pets," and the male half of the campus knows her as a "hot little number." If her group refrains from "petting" for policy's sake, she remains slightly aloof when her boy friend crowds in too close, and she is known in

SAUCE FOR THE GANDER, TOO

Co-eds who powdered in the class of a western university aroused the professor's ire, and he promised an "A" mark to any man who would shave in class just to let the girls see how they would like the medicine.

WOMEN'S CLUB ORGANIZATIONS

R.S.P.C.A. Refuses Huge Bequest Left By Anti-vivisectionist

Rich London Window Left $500,000 to Various Societies for Care of Animals; Opposed to Hunting and Similar Sports.

Because of a clause binding officers to anti-vivisection and to oppose all forms of sport involving animals, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in England has just refused a bequest of $500,000. The legacy was one of a number made to organizations devoted to the care of animals in the will of Mrs. Sarah Martha Grove Grady, a widow of London, who left £100,000 ($500,000) to such organizations.

Mrs. Grady, who had inherited property from ancestors connected with the woolen trade in the north of England, left estate valued at £600,356. She was a lonely widow whose chief interest in life was a deep love of animals. She was keenly opposed to hunting, and in her will she denounced the pursuit of deer, stags, foxes and rabbits as cruel.

£50,000 TO DISPENSARY Her principal bequest is £50,000 to the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals, of the Poor. Among her other gifts are:

£10,000 to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, on condition that the chairman and members of committees shall be and always have been anti-vivisectionists and opposed to sports involving the pursuit or death of stag, deer, fox, hare, rabbit or any bird, fish or any other animal, and shall use every means to abolish such sports.

£3,000 to the Anti-Vivisection Hospital, Battersea.

£5,000 to the National Anti-Vivisection Society.

£1,000 to the Hoose of Rest for Horses, Cricklewood.

£4,000 to the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

£1,000 to the Metropolitan Drinking Fountain and Cattle Troughs Association (for troughs only).

£1,000 to the Mayhew House for Stray Cats and Dogs.

£6,000 to the North London Dogs' Home.

£1,000 to the National Equine Defence League.

£5,000 to the National Canine Defence League.

£5,000 to the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection.

£2,500 to Ada Willis, secretary and manager of the Dodsworth Pitt Pony Society, for the purposes of the society.

R.S.P.C.A. REFUSES LEGACY Capt. Fairholme, the secretary of the R.S.P.C.A., stated that, owing to the conditions attached to the bequest of £10,000, the society is unable to accept it. The society holds a neutral position on vivisection, and it is impossible to pledge the members of the council as to future policy and action.

Mrs. Grady left, among other bequests, £5,000 to her housekeeper, Miss Emily Letitia Norman, "if still in her service and not under notice." The residue of her property she left for the founding of a society which is to acquire land for the purpose of providing "a refuge or refuges for the preservation of all animals, birds, or other creatures not human," there to be safe from molestation or destruction by man.

YOUR BABY and MINE by MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred will be glad to answer all questions pertaining to babies by a child. A stamped and self-addressed envelope forwarded to this office will bring a personal reply.

There is hardly a mother, I feel sure, who doesn't consider that her offspring is fortunate when he or she can have a nursemaid. There is something so seemingly elegant in turning over the care of one's children to someone else, seeing them trot off with a meal, holding them by the hand, that the tremendous disadvantage and sometimes real dangers of such a course are not taken into account.

This is not an indictment of all nursemaids. It has nothing to do with those good-hearted, if often ignorant, souls who have the true motherly instinct toward their small charges; but it is directed toward that class of careless, uneducated, mentally and morally backward young girls to whom mothers so often turn over the entire care of their children.

CARELESS NURSEMAIDS

A morning in Central Park would be an eye-opener for hundreds of mothers. In the crowded districts of New York, Central Park is the one playground for the children and every morning the paths and benches are packed with nursemaids and their charges. For the mother who happens to be caring for her own child in that polyglot area the sights are appalling.

A baby of six months of age sets forth a tiny, hungry wail he is much more likely to receive an angry blow in the face (no, this is not made up) than he is to get the proper attention. Nursemaids gossip and giggle, often with some swain in tow, and if their charges give too much trouble they slap them or yank them about and tell them to sit still and, with fearful tones, they do it still. They know if they don't there may be more than a hand used upon them.

Seldom does one ever hear other than angry words; curt, brutal commands, punctuated practically always by a stich. Courtesy, kindness, any real attention is so rare as to be astounding.

Then mothers wonder where their children learn such manners and such
